SCHENECTADY, Oct. 3—Part of seeing America first should include a visit to the General Electric plant, in this city.

The manufacturing establishment, employing about 30,000 men and women, will increase your interest in human beings, and the work they do.

An hour in the research laboratory will make you forget all about ordinary human beings in your admiration of scientific power.

Talk with Dr. Coolidge, Dr. Langmuir and Mr. Alexanderson, of that scientific laboratory, and you will know how Job felt after his conversation with the Almighty.

Like him, you will lay your hand upon your mouth determined to talk no more, only listen.

It was comparatively easy for Job, at least he could understand what was said to him. "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail.

"Canst thou guide Arcturus with his sons? Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?"

Dr. W. D. Coolidge tells you that the bright, white flame used in certain welding is obtained by breaking down the molecule of hydrogen, which is H-2 before you break it down. After the breaking, it is H plus H, meaning that one hydrogen molecule contains two hydrogen atoms.

After you have torn them apart, by use of high temperature, one atom rushes toward the other, like a frantic calf separated from its mother, and the hydrogen molecule is reformed. That rush produces the intense white heat that will fuse any metal, even aluminum, which can not be fused otherwise.

That heat is used, among other purposes, to cover with a fine layer of melted copper certain parts of an electric refrigerator. That seems humble work for a torn apart molecule. Who putting Hercules to dry dishes.

But that is not the finest thing about the laboratory. Its learned men devote their time to pure science, and the results made useful to millions of human beings.

You, perhaps, cannot digest the quantum theory, figure out ergs, measure space in curves, or think in the fourth dimension. But you can digest food, protected by perfect refrigeration.

Tearing the hydrogen atom away from its brother, two little families of electrons cruelly separated, with their positive and negative electric charges outraged, means utilizing the power locked up in the molecule.

When science goes farther, tearing the atom apart, using the force that unites the electrons in their little solar system, Niagara's power will be out of date. You can hold between thumb and forefinger atoms enough to transport you to China, or the moon, if you could use the cohesive power of their electrons.

Dr. Coolidge invented that method of producing intense heat by separation of the atoms. But he does not tell you so. He and his associate, Dr. Irving Langmuir and Dr. Whitney, chief of the laboratory, talk as impersonally as though the wonders about them created themselves, and they had nothing to do with it. Science and modesty are twins.

Dr. Langmuir, who invented the use of gas in electric light bulbs, greatly augmenting efficiency, in place of the old and necessarily incomplete vacuum,

ONE INJURED IN BLOODY FIGHT AT MILL

Officers Protect Workers Returning to Jobs in Textile Plant

Ludlow, Oct. 3 (AP)—A clash between police and organizers of the National Textile Workers' Association, a Communist organization, in which one man was injured and hurled four others persons were arrested, signalized the return to work today of spinners of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates.

They walked out Monday in protest against a new experimental working plan put into effect by the company.

Two mass meetings of the National Textile Workers Union arrived in town and took positions on the mill gate during the noon hour, passing out handbills calling for a general strike and attacking Sheriff Sutton for his part in Wednesday's affair.

Shortly after the noon hour, passing out handbills calling for a general strike and attacking Sheriff Sutton for his part in Wednesday's affair. Three hours and a half later, the strike was all over and the strikers were arrested.

The workers last night ratified a report of a committee that had conferred with the mill management and obtained an agreement to abandon the experiment in favor of the old system.

Ratification of the committee's report was not given, however, without strenuous efforts of the Textile Association's agitators to prevent it and after numerous interruptions of the meeting police were called to oust the disturbers.

The operatives by an overwhelming voice vote accepted the committee report and voted to return to work today.

The Hearst Papers Do Not Need Shearer to Present Facts to Congress

The editor of the New York American employed Mr. Shearer AMONG MANY OTHERS to write articles on the League of Nations and the World Court, and also to help in organizing whatever opposition there might be to the League of Nations and the World Court into a public petition to Congress.

The editor had no knowledge that Mr. Shearer was or ever had been in the pay of shipbuilding corporations—no more knowledge of this fact than Congress had at that time, or than the Republican managers had when they employed him to make speeches for the Republican party.

A newspaper has no use for lobbyists. The methods of newspaper procedure are obviously diametrically opposed to lobbying. There is no secret in journalistic processes. In fact, what is sought by newspapers is NOT SECRECY BUT THE UTMOST PUBLICITY.

The established method of the Hearst newspapers of presenting facts to Congress by means of the public prints and public petition is not merely entirely within law and ethics and in accordance with accepted usage, but is more than that.

IT IS ENTIRELY WITHIN AND ACCORDING TO CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS—rights guaranteed to the press and to the citizenship by the same instrument which creates the Senate and enables it to assemble and make laws and perform its functions.

The New York American, therefore, was proceeding under the highest law of the land and under the same authority under which the Senate exists and operates when an expres-

BODENHAMER IS NAMED WITHOUT ROLLCALL

World War Veterans' Choice Made Unanimous by Rival at Louisville

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 3 (AP)—O. L. Bodenhamer of Eldorado, Ark., was elected national commander of the American Legion here today.

Bodenhamer is the first man in the history of the legion ever to be elected without a roll call.

The delegates staged a demonstration resembling that at the national political convention. Hundreds of banners were carried to the stage after Bodenhamer's nomination, and he was also carried to the platform on the shoulders of Arkansas delegates.

The election was made unanimous upon motion of Albert L. Coates of Raleigh, N. C., who had been regarded as the only other serious contender for the commandership. When nominations were stated, Alabama yielded to North Carolina and Coates immediately rose and placed Bodenhamer in nomination and asked that his election be made unanimous.

It was done in a burst of applause.

Paul V. McNutt, retiring commander defeated both Bodenhamer and Cox at the San Antonio convention last year.

Father George F. Kettle, of Rochester, N. Y. was elected national chaplain.

The legion elected five national vice-commanders. Merton M. Paxton of Denver, Colo.; Willis M. Brown of Pontiac, Mich.; Milton D. Campbell of Cincinnati, Frank J. Noble of Philadelphia and Jerry Dugan of Wilmington, Del.

New Legion Commander a College Professor

The new commander of the Legion was born in Goldthwaite, Tex., and is a resident of Eldorado, Ark. He is a past commander of the Arkansas department of the Legion and also served as national executive committeeman for Arkansas and chairman of the national legislative committee of 1924-25.

After receiving his degree from Baylor University at Waco, Tex., Bodenhamer became a professor of English and dean of Son Marcos College.

He joined the army in April of 1917 and was discharged from the nineteenth infantry regular army, in July, 1919, as a major.

Kentucky Governor Invited to Boston

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 3 (AP)—Gov. Flem D. Sampson today was invited by members of Boston Post 250, American Legion, to attend the annual convention of the Legion in that city. The Legionnaires who came here from Louisville to extend the invitation were Post Commander Charles J. McCarty, Joseph C. Parsons, Lawrence D. Riley and John M. Sean.

Massachusetts V. F. W. Congratulates Legion

Congratulations on the achievement of the Massachusetts department, American Legion, in bringing the 1930 convention to Boston were wired to Louisville, Ky., today by the Massachusetts Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In his telegram to the Bay State delegation, Max Binger, state commander of the V. F. W., assured the hearty support of his organization.

SAMARITAN IS CRASH VICTIM

Playing the part of a "Good Samaritan" by driving to the Norwood hospital a friend whose wife was ready to undergo an operation, Charles H. Ely, Boston architect, was killed today when his car skidded and crashed into a tree in East Walpole.

Robert Leighton of Sharon, his passenger, is dying from injuries received in the accident. He is at Norwood hospital with both legs broken and a possible fracture of the skull.

Ely had taken the day off to play golf. Leighton was planning to hire a car to drive to the hospital to see his wife before she went under the knife and Ely offered to drive him there.

Near the Sharon-Walpole line the car skidded in wet leaves and left the road, striking the tree. Ely was pinned against the wheel and crushed to death.

The architect lived on Crest rd., Sharon.

Mrs. Leighton was taken home without being operated upon following the accident.

$50,000 in Bond Steal Is 'Lost'

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—A postman, who found $462,000 worth of 4½s $32,000 in securities stolen from the R. V. Hyeee company last month, was questioned today by Detectives who are searching for the $50,000 worth of the securities still missing.

Carl Forman, brought here from Boston, where he was arrested as the "master mind" in the theft, has confessed, police say.

Police say Forman admits having stuffed the securities into the mailbox where the postman found them, but he insists the whole $512,000 worth were in the package.

Forman declared he placed the package in the mail box on the night of Sept. 21. But the postman told police he did not find it until the afternoon of Sept. 23. Detectives did not reveal the name of the mail carrier.

Forman is the third to be arrested in the theft. Milton Alter, youthful messenger for the brokerage company, who gave the stocks to Forman and David Schwartzberg, 19, have confessed.

$13,000,000 Jump in Brokers' Loans

Washington, Oct. 3 (INS) An increase of $13,000,000 in brokers' loans, which are now at a new high record, was announced here late today by the Federal Reserve Board. According to the official figures, loans made on stocks and bonds to brokers and dealers by reporting members of the Federal Reserve Bank in New York city totaled $8,804,000,000 on October 2. This compares with a total of $8,761,000,000, the previous high record, on September 25.

STOCKS CRASH; STEEL OFF $10

Industrials and utilities broke wide open today in the final hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Losses ran in numerous issues from $4 to $50 a share. The flood of sell orders poured in until the final tap of the bell, and the tape ran about 40 minutes after the close.

The break was in many respects the worst in recent years.

Bearish attacks centered mostly around U. S. Steel, General Motors, Montgomery Ward and American & Foreign Power, as wiping out of margins and opening up of stop-loss orders swept thousands of selling orders into a disordered market.

Though the volume of selling was small compared to the "big days" of the early part of this year, there were practically no sections of the market exempt from the liquidation and short selling which drove stocks lower.

United States Steel finished the day at 213 for a loss of 10 points. Westinghouse at the close was down 17 points at 215. General Electric lost 12 points at 251½; Radio, 4 points at 83; New York Central Railroad, 6 points; American & Foreign Power, 19½ at 146 down 56 points from the high of last week.

General Motors was down 3 at 63½; Anaconda Copper, 5 points at 111; Montgomery Ward, 8½ at 106½; American Can, down 7 at 163½; Consolidated Gas down 10½ at 141½; American Smelting, down 3½ at 107½.

The shake-out in stocks released a good many millions of dollars for the call loan market, which explains the 6 per cent call rate today, contrasted with the 9 per cent time money rate.

Fire Chief Praises Deputy Gilman

For apprehending three young men who are alleged to have sounded a false fire alarm, Deputy Fire Chief Herbert D. Gilman is commended and given an additional week's vacation by Chief Daniel F. Sennott, in orders issued today.

Probationer Robert J. Alther of Ladder 12 is commended for responding to and working at a still alarm fire in Columbus ave. while off duty.

London, Oct. 3 (INS)—British Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson and M. Lovgaleen, Soviet Ambassador to France, signed an Anglo-Soviet agreement today for restoration of diplomatic relations.

Three Guards Killed in Prison Mutiny

Canon City, Col., Oct. 3 (AP)—Three guards were reported killed in a mutiny of approximately 1000 prisoners at the state penitentiary here today.

Several hundred prisoners in an unaccountable way gained access to the prison arsenal and obtained a large quantity of ammunition and guns and the outbreak occurred in the mess hall at the noon hour and was still under way an hour and a half later.

The howitzer company of the Colorado National Guard, stationed here, was called out and every available man in the city was called upon to help quell the outbreak. The prisoners, according to the meagre reports reaching newspaper men outside the walls, were holding several dozen guards as hey and had complete control of the institution.

The fire department of Canon City was called out to aid in quelling the mutiny. Ordinarily the prison houses about 1200 convicts but several hundred prisoners were on the prison farm a few miles distant at the time of the outbreak.

Police and sheriff's men were being rushed here from Colorado Springs in response to a request from the State Prison for aid in quelling the riot.

Many Chinese Dead in Clash at Wuchow

London, Oct. 3 (AP)—An exchange telegraph dispatch from Hongkong said it was unofficially reported there many persons had been killed and 3000 disarmed at Wuchow, where rebels and loyalists clashed.

Some of those generals who were expected to throw in their lot with the rebel movement have now sent assurances of loyalty to the Nanking government.

MOURN LOSS OF STRESEMANN

Washington, Oct. 3 (INS)—News of the death of Gustav Stresemann, German foreign minister, came as a shock today to officials of the American government, who have long regarded him as one of the outstanding figures and stabilizing influences in Europe's post war reconstruction.

The embassy here was deluged with expressions of regret and confidence from those in official life, and there were many tributes to the heroic part the German foreign minister has played in the difficult task of re-establishing the peace of Europe.

Senator William E. Borah (R.) of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, who has long been an admirer of Herr Stresemann, said:

"I think it will be conceded by all that Foreign Minister Stresemann had won a place among the first statesmen of the world.

HOOVER HOPES FOR TARIFF VICTORY WHEN HOUSE TAKES VOTE

NEW BATTLE ON FLEXIBLE PROVISION

Democratic and Insurgent Senators Believe They Can Keep It Out of Bill

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—President Hoover again must look to the House for support in obtaining legislation he desires, this time on the flexible tariff issue.

Having overridden the President's desire for continuance of the flexible tariff policy virtually as it is now, 47 to 42, the leaders of the Democratic-Republican Independent coalition in the Senate predicted felt sure that they both could retain control of the chamber and write a tariff bill to fit their liking.

The vote, they recalled, was virtually the same as that by which they twice wrote the export debenture plan into the farm bill over the President's objections, and they expressed confidence that they could sustain their determination to confine the tariff revision to agricultural commodities and not permit the numerous rate increases proposed in the industrial schedules.

The Republican regulars, however, were equally confident that the lineup which voted to take from the chief executive his power to change tariff rates after investigation by the tariff commission would be broken as the various rate sections of the bill come to a vote.

Many members of the group have reserved the right to vote as they please on proposed rate changes, and the regulars believe a number will vote for industrial rate increases affecting the industry of their own constituencies.

Under the flexible provisions written into the law by the Senate coalition, Congress would be given sole power to act upon the recommendations of the tariff commission, but would be restricted on such occasions to consideration of the rate or rates specified so as to prevent frequent attempts at general revision.

Pass Rider Basing Duties on Domestic Value

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—The Senate today adopted an amendment to the tariff bill authorizing the tariff commission to convert the ad valorem rates in the measure into rates based on domestic instead of foreign value and report them to Congress for action by Jan. 1, 1932.

While some opposition developed to the amendment from Democrats, this was offset by support from Republican Independents. No record vote was taken.

Pass Unemployment Bill as Tribute to Stresemann

Berlin, Oct. 3 (INS)—One of the greatest figures on the international political postwar horizon was removed today in the sudden death of Dr. Gustav Stresemann, foreign minister of Germany, from a stroke of apoplexy.

He was first stricken at midnight, and failed to regain consciousness.

The excitement of the last few days, during which Dr. Stresemann fought heroically against violent opposition to avoid an internal crisis, is held directly responsible for the death. The possible crisis revolved about plans for a new reform bill for unemployment relief. For hour late yesterday, Dr. Stresemann urged his associates, members of the German Peoples' party, not to vote against the measure. All his great political powers were expended in an effort to keep peace within his own ranks and prevent collapse of Stresemann's cabinet.

Within a few hours after the foreign minister's death in the Reichstag passed the unemployment relief bill by 238 to 155 votes, as a tribute of tribute to the dead minister.

The fatal stroke of apoplexy which caused the death of Dr. Stresemann occurred during a bridge party at his home.

U. S. Aids in Capital Death Case Mystery

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—Special Department of Justice agents today were assigned to investigate the mysterious death of Mrs. Virginia McPherson, a pretty nurse who was found strangled with a pajama cord in her apartment on Pennsylvania ave. two weeks ago.

The announcement was made by Attorney-General Mitchell and is one of the few times recently that the vast resources of the federal Government have been requested by the District of Columbia officers in solving crime.

DEATH TOLL IS 4 IN RIOT

Marion, N. C., Oct. 3—The number of dead from the textile mill riots at Marion Saturday was brought to four today, when Lonnie Bryson, 22, union man, died from bullet wounds in the chest and abdomen.

Seventeen men and a woman are still in the hospital.

Two companies of National Guardsmen were on duty to keep order, as authorities proceeded with investigation of the riot.

The coroner's jury impanelled to inquire into the deaths viewed the bodies.

Besides the coroner's jury Nat A. Townsend, executive counsellor to Governor Gardner, who, on September 11, settled a nine weeks' strike at the Marion Manufacturing Co.'s plant, arrived late last night to investigate for the Governor.

Mill Strike Death Trial Resumed Again in Carolina

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 3 (AP)—Recessed for a day in order that court attaches might summon a special venire, resumption of the third trial of defendants in the Gastonia strike slaying was set for today. Fred Erwin Beal, National Textile Workers Union southern organizer, and six other labor leaders are held on charges in connection with the slaying of O. F. Adelhoit, chief of police of Gastonia.

It was charged in the indictments that the governor, who is ex-officio chairman of the commission, and members of the county board, that board, had illegally received textbooks as gifts from companies bidding for Kentucky contracts.

The Hearst Papers Do Not Need Shearer

sion of public opinion was being sought by the New York American through petition and through publicity in the columns of a free press.

The New York American intended, AND STILL INTENDS, to present a popular petition to the Senate urging it to follow the injunction of George Washington, and keep this country free from foreign entanglements, such as the League of Nations and the World Court.

The Hearst papers adopted an exactly similar course in presenting to Congress a petition in favor of the soldiers' bonus and is now preparing an immense petition of citizens advocating a modification of our system of taxation in regard to earned incomes.

The Hearst papers advocate their policies with a publicity which reaches some 30,000,000 readers in this country. They have no occasion to use any other force or influence except the power of publicity. They believe that no other power is so wholesome, so effective, so democratic, so essentially American in process and principle.

The Hearst papers have long demanded the abolition of lobbying and lobbyists at Washington AND HAVE AT LAST SECURED, THROUGH THE SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE, AN INVESTIGATION OF ALL LOBBYISTS which promises to be thorough and genuine and which may result in effective legislation to suppress this national disgrace and danger, and to make it a criminal offense for any person to attempt to influence any Senator or Congressman except through public appeal.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

The following letter from Col. Frank Knox, general manager of the Hearst newspapers, dispensed with Mr. Shearer's services:

Sept. 11th, 1929.

Mr. W. B. Shearer,
45 Nassau Street,
New York City, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Shearer:—

In view of the fact that we were totally unaware of your financial arrangements with shipbuilding companies, under which you were paid a salary for certain propaganda work you were doing for them, and inasmuch as this arrangement of yours, which you now for the first time make public, obviously destroys your usefulness as a newspaper man associated with independent newspapers, we wish to notify you we do not wish to accept any further news articles or contributions from you for publication in the columns of our newspapers, or to continue your employment in any capacity in connection with our newspapers.

We would have been relieved of the necessity of taking this step if you had been frank enough to inform us in the beginning of your connection with shipbuilding firms.

Kindly acknowledge receipt of this letter.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) FRANK KNOX,
General Manager.

1 HURT, SEIZE 5 IN LUDLOW

Chief Raymond Miller were present at the gates of No. 8 and No. 11 mills today to prevent any disorder that might be fomented by the agitators. These were on hand and made strenuous efforts to dissuade the operatives from gathering at the gates.

They refused to desist and the police were finally compelled to use their clubs to prevent physical interference. Nathaniel Richards, 28, of Easthampton, one of the agitators, was severely cut and required medical attention.

Richards and the other four were taken to Springfield. In District court they pleaded not guilty. Their cases were put over to October 9. Bonds were set at $100 each. The other four gave their names as follows:

Rose M. Ross, 19, and Harry Hirsch, 18, of New Haven, Conn.; Ruth Fisher, 20, and Jack Ross, 22, Springfield.

HUNDREDS RESUMING WORK

Those who returned to work in the mills today included the 250 strikers and several hundred others who had been thrown out of work by the strike.

The meeting last night in which decision to return was reached was a stormy one, due to the presence and vociferous arguments of the National Textile Association organizers.

John F. Gatelee, president of the Springfield Central Labor Union, attended the meeting and in a 15-minute address won over the strikers and sympathizers to saner views and to a decision to affiliate with the Central Labor Union.

So constantly were the speakers interrupted that the police were called several times to quell disputants and finally they were forcibly removed from the hall.

The strike was caused by the introduction of a plan whereby the spinners were to operate four sides of a frame, with helpers, instead of two sides. The operatives contended that this would mean increased their work without corresponding gain in wages.

The company held that the plan was only experimental and in view of the opposition has agreed to drop it.

France Honors Two New England Men

Woonsocket, R. I., Oct. 3 (INS)—Word was received from Washington today that Paul Claudel, the French ambassador, had been advised that President Doumergue of the French Republic had conferred the Legion of Honor.

President Doumergue also made Ellis Nesins of this city, supreme secretary of Union St. Jean Baptiste, a knight of the Legion of Honor.

The honors were in recognition of the service of the French cause and language in New England.

The French ambassador sent word that he would attend the Burlington, Vt., convention of St. Jean Baptiste October 15.

M'DONALD HAS REST AS SHIP NEARS PORT

British Premier Is Hopeful His Mission to America Will Be Success

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—President Hoover and Secretary Stimson today sent messages by radio to Premier MacDonald aboard the S. S. Berengaria, welcoming him to this country.

S. S. Berengaria, Oct. 3 (AP)—J. Ramsay MacDonald, British Prime Minister, who is expected to arrive off New York at dawn tomorrow on his visit to the United States, rested today.

Six days aboard ship have done Mr. MacDonald, his daughter, Miss Ishbel, and members of his party a world of good, and all will face the reception in the American metropolis tomorrow with pleasant anticipation.

The Berengaria today was making her voyage through the West Atlantic at reduced speed, so that the giant Cunarder might not reach quarantine before daybreak Friday and thus complicate the reception arrangements.

As it now is the steamship is expected to reach quarantine about 6 a. m. Friday, which will permit the distinguished passengers to board the city tug Macom shortly afterward and proceed up the bay to the battery, where they will be taken up Broadway to New York's City Hall.

There will be only a brief stay in New York tomorrow. The Premier and his party will proceed before noon for Washington, where Mr. MacDonald will confer with President Hoover on Anglo-American relations in general and naval limitation and reduction in particular. He is hopeful of success. After a few days in Washington the party will be New York's guests for a longer stay.

Pastor Sees Hoover and MacDonald Meeting as Epoch

The meeting of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald for a conference was called one of the epochs in American history today by the Rev. Vivian T. Pomeroy in his noon address in King's Chapel.

"Never was a meeting taken place before and it is the sign of a closer union between these two English-speaking peoples which will bring about greater results in international affairs. Such leaders will show what the forming of nations can do and why the world can make peace its fundamental principle," he said.

Says Freshmen Try Too Much, Do Nothing

College freshmen try to see everything, with the result that they accomplish nothing, Lucy Jenkins Franklin, dean of women at Boston University, told the entire student body of the School of Education and Sargent School today.

The occasion was the first assembly with Sargent School taking part as a new department of the university.

"Coordination of interests is very essential," Dean Franklin said. "Freshmen are usually in a state of chaos and do not study their individual problems. Each subject and each activity should be taken in the order of its importance and threshed out."

TUNNEY WANTS PRIVACY NOW

Berlin, Oct. 3—"You may write that I am conceited and arrogant, anything you want, but I don't want to make any public statement."

Thus did James J. Tunney, retired world's heavyweight boxing champion, deny Berlin reporters an interview. The much harrassed former fighter, who is in this city in company with his wife, the former Polly Lauder, on second honeymoon, added:

"I am not conceited, but I want to live as a private citizen. I am no longer a public figure."

Mr. and Mrs. Tunney's visit to Dr. A. W. Meyer, the surgeon who operated on Mrs. Tunney at Briona this spring, gave rise to the report that Tunney was ailing and in need of an operation. This was denied by Dr. Meyer, who said:

"The Tunneys are here on a sightseeing tour. Both are feeling fine and merely paid me a friendly call. They have not seen any other physician."

Seek Approval of Vt. Utility Merger

Concord, N. H., Oct. 3 (AP)—Two petitions for approval of security issues were filed today with the State Public Service Commission, one involving the consolidation of three Vermont utilities doing business in this state.

The Vermont Hydro-Electric Corporation, the Bradford, Vt., Electric Light Company, Inc., and the Windsor, Vt., Electric Light Company jointly petitioned with the Central Vermont Public Service Corporation for authority for the first three to sell and the fourth to acquire all the New Hampshire assets of the first three petitioners. The petition also sought permission for the purchasing utility to issue bonds and stock to pay for the properties.

The Grafton County Electric Light & Power Company asked for approval of an issue of $700 additional $100 par value common shares to retire the 3250 shares of preferred stock and to pay for recent improvements.

Facing Trial, Aged Woman Takes Poison

A few hours before she was to appear in court on a charge of illegal surgery on a Norwood woman, who is dying at her home, Mrs. Anna Simon, 75, of Grossman st., Quincy, attempted suicide by swallowing poison in her home today.

She was sent to Quincy City hospital in a police ambulance. Her name is on the danger list. Mrs. Simon was arrested by Chief of Police Sullivan of Norwood and admitted to bail. She is charged with performing the operation on Mrs. Rose Long, 26, a mother of three children.

Yale Boys Can Fly to Georgia for Game

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 3 (AP)—Yale undergraduates will be able to fly to and back from the Yale-Georgia game for only $125—a little more than the total railroad fare.

This low price was obtained for them by the newly-created air department of the Yale Travel Bureau.

MEXICO BARES U. S. 'PLOT' TO CONSERVE OIL

Charge American Wells on Border Allowed to Lag Pending "Emergency"

Mexico City, Oct. 3 (AP)—American oil companies operating in Mexico were charged in a statement by the Mexican Department of Industry and Commerce published today with letting operations in Mexico lag so as to conserve a supply near the United States for an emergency.

The statement was in answer to figures recently put before the Mexican Chamber of Deputies by the oil men in connection with discussion of the proposed new labor laws.

In these figures the oil men pointed out an enormous drop in production in Mexico since 1921.

The department said that while production in Mexico had been allowed to lag the same big companies were exploiting fields in South America because they were more distant from the United States.

Former President Coolidge was cited as authority for the statement that national supremacy lay in oil, and that the defense of the United States would be endangered when the oil supply of the United States was exhausted.

The department said its object in pointing out the real cause of the decrease in production in Mexico was to show that the government was not hindering exploitation, although it was admitted the government had been unable to settle the oil problm "created by foreign factors."

Mexico to Give Seized Property to University

Mexico City, Oct. 3 (AP)—The government announced today properties seized from persons implicated in the revolution of last month would be given to the National University either for sale or exploitation. The confiscated properties are worth millions of dollars.

Blames Maine Driver in Danvers Fatality

Salem, Oct. 3 (AP)—Judge Robert W. Hill today declared in an inquest finding that Ella Williams, six, of Danvers, who was killed here September 18 by an automobile driven by Harvard K. Harding of Portland, Me., died "as the result of Harding's unlawful act and improper operation" of the car. Judge Hill found that Harding could have avoided striking the child if he had halted his automobile instead of trying to get by the girl as she crossed a street with other children.

Anita Treats London to Tweed Pajamas

London, Oct. 3 (INS)—Women's tweed pajamas made on the "harem-skirt" principle are the latest for house wear in London. Anita Loos, author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is the sponsor.

"I am not a dress reformer," says Anita, "but these pajamas are the most comfortable things for house wear that one could imagine. They are already becoming popular in France, and I hope to introduce them to America."

Amnesty Granted Political Exiles

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 3 (AP)—Several political exiles in the colonies will be repatriated Oct. 5, the national holiday, though no formal announcement has been made.

Premier Ivens Feraz today said: "An amnesty at the present juncture would be dangerous, as many restless elements exist bent upon upsetting the political tranquility which is the aim of the Government."

Brookline's Unsung War Hero Goes to Fight for Fame

WILL TELL OF YORK'S 'ONE MAN' RAID

Ex-Sergt. Merrithew to Reveal Facts in Case to War Department

With a home-cooked lunch in the pocket of his spick khaki uniform, ex-Sergt. Otis B. Merrithew of Brookline, unsung hero of one of the greatest exploits of the A. E. F., boarded a Washington-bound train today.

He is bent on telling War Department officials a "man-sized mouthful" of unpalatable facts apropos the price of glory.

If Merrithew and several of his former buddies are right, he and another unadvertised New England non-com performed the battle feat which won a congressional medal, international fame and a flood of financial reward for Sergt. Alvin York, Tennessee mountaineer.

The latest overseas veteran to hack Merrithew's story turned up today. He is George H. Moreau of 200 South st., Brookline. He declared that York, as is now claimed, got more than his share of credit.

After 10 years, Merrithew has only a Brookline street department job to show for his overseas valor, his wounds, and his reluctance to talk big.

Bound thus tardily for a showdown today, he saw his own prospects of official recognition at Washington as none too bright. Officials of the Army War College originally invited him there as a guest of honor. He was to go by airplane and be feted as would become a one-time associate, however humble, of the "greatest hero of the World War"—the much decorated York.

Today things were slightly different.

Having been widely quoted as unimpressed with York's story and as flatly contradicting several of its most hair-raising details, Merrithew journeyed Washingtonwards with a strong conviction that he'd find the "welcome" painted off the War College door mat.

His airplane ride had been cancelled. He'd been curtly told to come by train but he hadn't been told what train or when. He hadn't been urged to expect an escort to meet him. He hadn't exactly been teased to come at all.

Moreover his "expenses," forwarded to him at the last minute, failed even to pay his railroad fare, let alone provide the price of meals or a tip for the porter.

ONLY $20 SENT

Exactly $20 was the war department's notion of what a minor hero should rank as transportation wherewithal from Brookline to Washington. The ticket alone cost $20.60. That was why ex-Sergt. Merrithew took the lunch his wife had packed for him.

Washington officialdom might annoy Chauffeur Merrithew of the Brookline street department and get away with it—but it will be a different matter to slight the topkick who according to all versions of the disputed story, at least had a principal hand in demoralizing and capturing a whole German machine gun Company.

WALSH AIDS HIM.

Merrithew left Brookline determined to have the "inside" facts of the Argonne engagement bared at last. He carried no documentary data, but he said he thought he wouldn't need many affidavits.

"The boys will remember, once we talk it all over together," he predicted.

"You don't forget that sort of thing."

The Brookline Veterans of Foreign Wars gave him a rousing send-off at the Boylston school and a uniformed delegation took him to the Back Bay station.

Brookline officials promised their influence to see fair play.

Senator Walsh was busy at Washington superintending a search through army archives for evidence corroborating his claim. His wife and two children saw him depart.

Princess Improves

Bramaer, Scotland, Oct. 3—The Princess Royal was reported improved, the tone of her heart being more satisfactory, according to an official bulletin issued at Mar Lodge. The princess' heart has caused considerable anxiety since Sunday, when she was taken ill.

Off to Claim His Laurels and Learn the Price of Glory

George H. Moreau of South st., Brookline, who served 22 months overseas in Co. G, 328th Infantry, 82d Division, who backs Merrithew's claim that credit given Sergt. York should be shared by other heroes who took part in the feat.

FAVOR ONE RAIL SYSTEM IN N. E.

Hartford, Oct. 3 (AP)—The New England Traffic League, which held its fall meeting here today, went on record as favoring an all-New England railroad system and as opposing such pending plans of consolidation as would link New England roads with trunk lines.

The organization instructed its officers to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington to oppose the so-called Loree plan affecting 16 railroads, including the New Haven, and the Wabash plan, which would combine all New England roads except the New Haven.

Incorporated in the minutes of today's proceedings was the league's belief that the linking of New England roads to trunk lines, would cause shippers to lose many transportation advantages, especially in event of emergency, when outlets for their products might be shut off.

BISHOP MURRAY DROPS DEAD

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 3—Bishop John Gardner Murray, head of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, died today, from a stroke of apoplexy, during a meeting of the House of Bishops.

The bishop died close by the altar of St. James Church, North Carolina and Pacific aves., where he presided this morning at the business session of the House of Bishops. Death, sudden and unexpected, came as he was about to announce adjournment for lunch.

The bishop presided at the annual meeting since Monday, and had at no time complained of illness. Today, however, he expressed a desire to bring the sessions to an early close so that he might return to his home.

The bishop was standing before the altar when he collapsed and fell to the floor.

SOUTH BOSTON CUP NIGHT

Cup night, with the annual presentation of yachting trophies for the past club championship season, was held last night in the Strandway quarters of the South Boston Yacht Club. Com. Charles H. Mehegan awarded the prize silverware to the following: Saxon championship, class I, Dorothy, Elmer Pyne; Indian class, first series, Twono, C. H. Mehegan; Indian class, second series, Twono C. C. H. Mehegan; special class I, Jackson trophy race, Dorchen II, James Finlay; special Indian, Mrs. Carr Trophy race, Gosling, Robert Dalrymple.

The class I twilight series for the Eagar cup was won by Frank Hurley's Louise. The Chowder race, David Hickey trophy, was awarded to Robert Dalrymple's Gosling, with Walter Hallett's Lark second. The Barrett and Turner trophies and also a $25 cash prize for the ocean race, went to Capt. Jack Knight of the Monarch, and second prize to Capt. Oberlander of the Magnolia.

The commodore's cup for class I was awarded to James Finlay's Dorchen II, and Rear-Commodore McDonald's cup to Robert Dalrymple's Goslin. A pair of binoculars was given by the club to Capt. Frank Holbrook of the coast guard station boat, City Point, in appreciation of his work during the race season.

A strong wind was lashing the shore last night and Capt. Holbrook, who was on duty, hauling boats off the beach, was unable to attend for the cup night ceremonies. A supper followed the presentation.

Hub Woman Shares in $10,000,000 Estate

Mrs. Frances G. Brown of Limr st., Back Bay, who will receive a share of an estate of nearly $10,000,000, left by her father, Paul B. Gray, Detroit capitalist, returned home today following the probating of the will in Detroit.

One-third of the estate goes to the widow, Mrs. Francis Noble Gray, and the remaining two thirds is to be divided equally among three daughters, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Elizabeth Gray Sackett of New York, and Mrs. Ann Gray Shorey of Detroit.

Mrs. Brown is the wife of Waldo H. Brown, who is associated with the Colonial Air Transport. The couple has two young children.

Commend Hoover on Stand for Peace

Atlantic City, Oct. 3—President Hoover was commended for his "great efforts to gain world peace" by the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in a resolution assuring him of "devoted support."

The resolution extended greetings to Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, and also suggested the observance of Armistice Day in churches on the preceding Sunday.

Lindy Lands Safely in San Salvador

N. H. Sets Own Date to Honor Pulaski

Concord, N. H., Oct. 3 (AP)—The New Hampshire legislature, at its last session, deliberated with becoming dignity the question proclaiming general observance of the 150th anniversary of the death of a great patriot, Brig.-Gen. Casimir Pulaski, revolutionary war hero. It passed a resolution setting October 9 as the day upon which the memory of the patriot should be honored.

Yesterday Gov. Charles W. Tobey, with due solemnity, ordered that the national colors be displayed on public buildings throughout the state on Oct. 9. Then, some inquisitive soul spoiled it all by discovering that Gen. Pulaski did not die on Oct. 9, but on Oct. 11. He was wounded on Oct. 8, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, Ga., and died two days later.

The office of the secretary of state expressed the opinion that New Hampshire must celebrate Gen. Pulaski's death Oct. 9, whether the general died on Oct. 9 or not.

Several municipalities have minds of their own and will celebrate Oct. 11.

ST. STEPHEN'S TO BE REBUILT

With funds contributed by members of all denominations, St. Stephen's Church, practically destroyed by fire, will be reconstructed on its present site in Hanover st., without loss of its famous Pulpinch architecture, Rev. Francis Murphy, the pastor, announced today.

A number of large contributions for the work already have been received from Catholics and Protestants.

Rev. Fr. Murphy is forming a committee of prominent Bostonians who will be authorized to receive further contributions.

Maginnis & Walsh, architects, are planning the work.

Marine Is Seized in Chelsea Crash

A marine corps truck crashed into a parked automobile at Pearl and Williams sts., Chelsea, mounted the sidewalk and went through the fence about the Green Shipyards today. Police arrested Private Harold C. Shaw, 20, attached to the marine corps at the Boston navy yard, on charges of drunkenness and driving under influence of liquor.

The parked car, owned by Mary E. Willard, of Eleanor st., Chelsea, was badly damaged, as was the truck.

Child Behavior Lectures Planned

Dr. William Healy, director of the Judge Baker Foundation, is to preside at the first of a series of six lectures by noted authorities in the field of child behavior given by the Massachusetts Civic League in co-operation with the Judge Baker Foundation. There will be six of these lectures on successive Wednesdays, beginning Oct. 16, at

BUSINESS MEN SUPPORTING N. E. SURVEY

Expect It Will Be of Great Importance in Developing Foreign Trade

Whole-hearted support of New England business men in the forthcoming Department of Commerce survey of foreign trade conditions in New England was seen today in the many promises of co-operation received by Dr. Charles E. Artman, economic specialist of the department in Washington, during his two-day visit to Boston.

"The importance of this survey to New England cannot be overestimated in the opinion of those who have been following its developments," Dr. Artman said today, "but its effectiveness will depend upon the whole-hearted support of New England business for its completion.

"So far, the support given has been all that could be asked for."

HOLD CONFERENCE.

Dr. Artman and Hugh Butler, head of the Boston office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, today continued conferences with prominent business men and economic specialists, preparatory to drawing up the final details of the conduct of the survey.

Yesterday upon Dr. Artman's arrival in Boston from Washington, officers of the New England Council, the New England Export Club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Dr. G. R. Rounbach, professor of foreign trade at Harvard, and others met to listen to the outline of the survey plans.

Data will be sought from New England manufacturers as to their foreign business, Dr. Artman said, and will form the basis of the study.

COLLECTING THE FACTS.

"The study is expected to lay the factual basis for the systematic development of the overseas commerce of New England," he explained. "While the individual reports will be kept entirely confidential, the aggregate information is expected to shed much new light on New England's foreign trade. As competition in domestic markets increases, the opportunities in foreign markets are becoming of the utmost significance."

Dr. Artman will return to Washington tonight to discuss the survey with department officials there. Butler, who will take charge of the conduct of the survey, will accompany him.

The survey is expected to be completed before the end of November.

RUM RUNNER TO HUNT RUM SHIPS

New Haven, Oct. 3 (AP)—The rum-running schooner John M Hathaway of New Bedford, Mass., caught in the act of violating the prohibition law will chase rum-runners, the coast guard, in catching other rum-runners.

Judge Edwin S. Thomas of the United States District Court here has ruled that the Hathaway be turned over to the commander of the destroyer force, United States Coast Guard Service, at New London, to be used to enforce customs laws.

The Hathaway, owned jointly by Michael Smith and Andrew E. Hathaway of New Bedford, was captured by the coast guard patrol boat Wilkes on June 2, off the coast of New York, when guardsmen said the crew of six were at the time transferring to the hold liquor from a foreign ship.

Mabel Normand at Crisis in Sickness

Los Angeles, Oct. 3 (AP)—Mabel Normand, once a star of motion picture fame, has reached the crisis stage in a fight against tuberculosis, her physician, Dr. Francis M. Pottenger, announced. Miss Normand is in a sanitarium in Monrovia, Cal.

Miss Normand and Lew Cody, motion picture actor, were married in 1926.

French Women to Fight on for Vote

Paris, Oct. 3 (INS)—French women are bitterly re-proaching the Senate for continuing to refuse them the right to vote.

The fact that the women of Rumania have recently been enfranchised adds to their chagrin. They are resolved to put forth stronger efforts than ever the coming year to obtain woman suffrage.

Judge Hits Wives Who Leave Hubby Home

Providence, Oct. 3—Wives who work and, because they work seize the privilege of seeking their own entertainment without the company of their husbands, were criticized by Judge G. Frederick Frost in superior court.

"I am only conservative, but I feel that many women of today would be better off if they conducted themselves differently," he said, denying the divorce sought by Mrs. Lillie Allen of Pawtucket from Earl V. Allen.

Allen is a member of one of the city's oldest and once wealthiest families. The family lost its fortune and Mrs. Allen and her husband have both been working. She ment, alleging that when she went out nights to seek her own pleasure her husband followed her.

The wife testified that her husband once placed handcuffs on her. Allen said that was a joke. Judge Frost found it so.

Mrs. Allen sought a divorce two years ago, but was reconciled before the petition was heard.

DEATH NEARS 'FLYING GRANNY'

Chicopee, Oct. 3 (AP)—Grandma Almatia Bennett of Chicopee Falls, who several years ago formed the habit of celebrating her birthdays with airplane flights and who last month observed her 103d anniversary in this manner, has but a few days more to live, according to her physician today.

She took to her bed Tuesday, due to a general and gradual slowing down of the physical machinery, which it is said, was kept in normal operation for some time by the exhilaration of the annual birthday flight of September 8.

At that time Mrs. Bennett was taken up from the local airport for a short flight by Miss Maude Irving Tait, a local pilot, and seemingly enjoyed the experience as much as those that had preceded it.

"Grandma" Bennett began her birthday flights at the age of 95 and then skipped several years until her 100th anniversary. Since then yearly flights have taken place.

Lincoln Kin Dies

Mrs. Elizabeth Todd Brent, a distant relative of Abraham Lincoln and a member of a prominent Lexington, Ky., family will be buried in Lexington today. Mrs. Brent was born in Lexington in 1849.

FIVE KILLED BY B. & M. FLIER

Sudden death was meted out to five men in Warren, N. H., today, when the Red Wing, crack Boston-Montreal flier of the Boston & Maine Railroad, crashed into an automobile on an unguarded crossing.

The dead:

William E. Johnson, 28, Evergreen, Ala.

Ernest Anderson, 31, Worcester.

Paul Baldwin, 30, Barton, Vt.

Joseph LeClair, 29, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hugh Tucker, 30, Waco, Tex.

Boston & Maine officials have started an investigation of the accident. A preliminary report states that the men met death at the first crossing the train reaches on entering the town. The engine crew states they whistled and sounded the bell for the crossing.

They also state that the engineer whistled for a second crossing, a short distance ahead, just before the train reached the first crossing. The crossing is unguarded at night.

It is believed that the driver of the automobile may have been blinded by the heavy rain falling at the time of the crash.

All five were employed by a power company as field workers. The grade crossing was not guarded, police said. They were on the way to the power plant when the tragedy occurred.

The train was speeding from Boston to Montreal. As it passed over the village crossing the automobile loomed in its path.

Before the engineer could apply the brakes the machine and its passengers were hurled in all directions. The five men were dead when picked up.

Tucker, who was foreman at the power plant, was married. His wife is living in Chicago at present.

The men were part of a gang of 25 who arrived in Warren from Worcester yesterday, and were prepared for about three months' work. They spent the evening in Warren and left early today for their quarters.

The five were in a small sedan, and the wreckage of the car was strewn along the tracks.

Battles for Dog That Saved Son's Life

Springfield, Oct., 3—Gelasse J. Dragon of Sumner ave., defendant in the superior court on a charge of having refused to remove a dog from the city when ordered to do so by the chief of police, fought for the animal he said once saved his son's life.

It was alleged the dog had bitten two persons and the animal was shown, teeth and all, to Judge David F. Dillon and the jury.

"Jack," however, was first securely tied with a rope by its master. The defendant conducted his own case and asked a directed verdict on the ground the ordinance providing for the dog's removal was not in evidence and was unconstitutional. It is expected that the ordinance will be offered for the tionality.

Lawrence J. Huntoon, fire department inspector, said his trousers were torn by the dog on May 9 and another man said that he had been bitten by the animal in August, 1928.

Dragon said that he was not fighting for himself, but that he was fighting for a home for my dog. That dog saved the life of my boy when he was drowning. If he bit any boy I would shoot him because any dog that bites is a

'CAVE MAN' PUTS UP LOG CABIN IN WILDS

By BURT M. McCONNELL

Copyright, 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Bear-Trap Lake Portage, Sept. 26—It was only after McKibbin's canoe disappeared around the first bend in the Washimeska that the immensity of my cave-man project forced itself upon me. Conceived on a sizzling June day as a novel sort of vacation, the plan assumed major proportions.

The sun had been shining when we said good-bye upon a gray cloud hid the sun for a few moments, and a chill wind sprang up out of nowhere.

Dressed only in cotton running trunks and sleeveless cotton jersey, I shivered the damp mould under my bare feet and added to my discomfort. It was then that I realized for the first time what a staggering task I had set myself.

Here I was, a modern man, without a cave—without even a flint, food, clothing or shelter, which I believe are considered the four prime necessities of civilized man. Which of these, I asked myself, was the most important. It seemed that if I had a shelter, I would not need any of the others. The next morning, for it should rain, I would be sunk, then and there.

BUILDS LOG CABIN

A shelter in a thick pine and balsam and spruce forest, surely as this is not a tremendous undertaking. The pines are straight and uniform in size.

My axe was so sharp that a dozen blows would fell a six-inch tree. And enough trees to build the shelter were obtainable within a 100-foot radius.

My log was finished. I decided to have a close look at my surroundings. Looking for big game trails had always had its fascination for me, but just then I was thinking of something to eat.

Within a few hours I had acquired the habit of those who dwell on the silent places, the habit of talking to themselves.

Widening my circle, I came to the portage itself, a well-beaten path leading over a divide some 500 feet high to an expanse of lake about a mile and a half to the northward. There were some goose tracks in the trail, but I were not very fresh. However, I thought, this old bull might be at the lake itself. It was almost sunset, but I kept on with my axe as my only weapon. And what a reward awaited me!

FINDS MOOSE HIDE

High up in a tamarack birch about fifty feet off the portage was a dark, heavy bundle that could be nothing but a moose hide left there by an Indian. This was too good to be true. It was a life saver. For in my present state of dishabille, no lack-pine shelter would keep me comfortable during the night, when the thermometer usually falls below 40 degrees.

In my excitement, I ran to the tree, skinned up it, and cut down the bundle with my axe. Descending at dangerous speed for one unused to climbing trees, I slashed the precious rawhide thongs, which I might have saved for such purposes, and unrolled the hide. It was in the raw state, and, so far as I could judge, that of a full-sized bull killed in the fall. But I was not in a mood to be finicky; the furred hide of any dead animal would have been welcome.

Unrolling the package still further, I came upon another treasure—the untanned skin of a small red deer, a piece of unsmoked bacon of the deer, a moose's shin bone, and an ample covering of moose skin. Surely an odd assortment.

TAKES LOOT TO CABIN

Standing there, gloating over these treasures, the thought suddenly occurred to me: Would it be fair to avail myself of these valuable articles? They, or those like them, were found in the woods. There was no known precedent to follow, for probably no one had ever cached anything there were too many others prowling about, not to mention the ever-hungry animals such as the wolverine.

Before there was a freezing night about me, dictated by the old law of self-preservation, and I carried the loot to the cabin.

Detroit, Oct. 3—The will of Paul E. Gray, Detroit capitalist, who died recently in the East, has been admitted to probate. The estate is valued at approximately $10,000,000. All the personal property, plus $50,000 goes to the widow, Mrs. Frances Noble Gray.

BELIEVE FLOOD PERIL AVERTED IN AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., Oct. 3 (AP)—Still ceaselessly fighting to hold back the wall of water that has pounded at the city levee since Monday, citizens of Augusta today believed their desperate fight against the floods of the Savannah river had been won.

Although the river had reached a stage of 44.8 feet, Weather Bureau officials said they expected a recession to begin momentarily.

Some 500 men early today relieved a night force of 1500 who worked at strengthening the levee with sandbags, and late this morning, except for the three crevasses below the city, the levee stood intact.

Additional damage was caused during the night by the pressure of the waters. A span of a railroad bridge across the Savannah was washed away, along with several freight cars which had been placed on the bridge as ballast. Several power dams in Horse Valley, across the Savannah river, had been washed out and one was dynamited to protect the little town of Graniteville, S. C.

Augusta still was cut off from rail and highway communication. United States Highway No. 1 had been washed out in one place, while railbeds covered with water caused railroad officials to hold up their train schedules. Resumption of service awaited only the recession of the waters.

FOUR HURL LIE AT "FAKE" RECORDS

A minister, a church deacon, a member of the State Legislature and a leading merchant, all of Danvers, were today indignantly denying that they had any knowledge of how their names happened to be affixed to liquor prescriptions found in a Danvers drug store.

The names, together with that of Chairman Harold D. Stone of the board of selectmen, in the records of a local druggist by prohibition agents checking up the alleged illegal use of the blanks by a Danvers physician, now accounting for missing. Stone had previously denied knowledge of the prescriptions.

Friends of the five men are convinced that the use of their names in connection with the purchase of pints of whiskey was made by some unscrupulous person confronted with the necessity of accounting for the absence of numerous bottles of whiskey when prohibition enforcement inspectors called around to check prescription blanks and missing whiskey.

Whether there is connection between the investigation which has been in progress and the sudden closing of a drug store which has attracted the attention of both federal officers and Danvers policemen has not been revealed, but locally it was regarded as significant.

TEXAS RANGERS ARREST 40

Borger, Tex., Oct. 3 (AP)—Four squads of militiamen, led by Texas rangers, early today had put well under way the general cleanup of Borger, ordered by Gen. Jacob F. Wolters, commander since martial law was proclaimed, with two-score arrests, most of them women.

Meanwhile, the general's military court of inquiry was prepared to resume questioning witnesses to determine who assassinated Dist. Atty. John A. Holmes, Sept. 13, and to have an alleged conspiracy of disposed city and county peace officers with criminals.

Martial law, which Wolters intimated were designed to rid the oil town of those things who had not already been sent forward smoothly under the tutelage of the vehmic rangers. Pistols, shotguns, rifles, whiskey and Jamaica ginger were confiscated.

The domestic help problem is solved by using a kitchenette apartment. All best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

Envoy Leaps Wall to Flee Soviet Embassy

Paris, Oct. 3 (AP)—Paris newspapers today printed a story of the plight of M. Bessedowsky, counselor and charge d'affaires at the Soviet embassy, who they said, had left the service of the Kremlin government rather than return to Moscow.

M. Bessedowsky was said to have been seen to jump precipitately over the garden wall of the embassy with agility not usually associated with members of the Diplomatic Corps, and to rush breathlessly, although somewhat bruised to the police station.

There he asked that his wife and child be rescued from their room inside the building. He said the doorkeepers had threatened him with the pistols when he tried to leave the building by the usual places of exit.

He explained that an agent of the Soviet secret police had accused him of heresies and had ordered him to return to Moscow.

The police invaded the ex-ambassadorial property, secured Madam Bessedowsky and her child, and turned them over to the counsellor.

M. Bessedowsky's heresies, according to his story, consisted of thinking the Government ought to pay the peasants more for their wheat.

OPPOSE ROTARY CHURCH FUNDS

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 3 (AP)—An appeal for more spiritual zeal and less of the "gospel of the Rotarian and Kiwanian" in the collection of funds for church work was made at the convention of the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The Rt. Rev. Harry S. Longley, bishop coadjutor of Iowa, made the plea.

Bishop Perry of Rhode Island joined in the criticism, asserting a "feeling of complacency and to as you please" resulted from present methods.

Lewis R. Fraatis of New York, vice-president and treasurer of the national council, agreed with the bishops, but said past results proved the "pay as you go" plan more productive than any other.

Family Returns, Finds Home Burned

While the mother of the family was attending funeral services for a friend less than a mile away, the father was at work, and two children at school, fire swept through a dwelling house on Longwood rd., Reading, resulting in $3000 damage.

Firemen, after a half-hour battle, extinguished the blaze. One side of the dwelling was gutted from cellar to roof. The home is occupied by Lawrence R. Fratus.

$30,000 FIRE IN 3 UXBRIDGE BUILDINGS

Uxbridge, Oct. 3—Ten automobiles and a garage were destroyed and two other buildings damaged by fire following an explosion early today. The blaze occurred in the Atanian Motor Garage. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

Windows of all buildings within a 100 yards of the scene were broken by the explosion.

When firemen arrived the garage was burning briskly and fire had already spread to the adjoining Harris building, a three-story brick structure.

The third building damaged is used as a battery service station. All three are owned by John Dallymple of Millville.

An investigation to determine the cause of the explosion and fire has begun by the police. The garage, a one-story brick structure, was wrecked.

The first floor of the Harris block was occupied by B. Dickman, clothier, and the Silhouette shop, second floor by a beauty parlor and the inp by a lodge of Redmen. Regalia of this organization valued at hundreds of dollars was destroyed.

Hold Dancing Girl for Reinstein 'Threat'

Betty Smith of Castlegate rd., Roxbury, previously questioned in connection with the slaying of Samuel Reinstein, was taken into custody today as a result of an argument with a man in a Back Bay Chinese restaurant.

She was identified as the girl who on Saturday night was heard to say to her escort:

"If you don't kick back with that wrist watch and ring, I'll tell what you know about the Sammy Reinstein case."

She was apprehended in a Norway st. house by Inspectors Donovan, Egan, Mulrey and Bonner and Patrolman Joseph O'Donnell of Back Bay division.

O'Donnell identified the girl and she was taken to the courthouse for questioning by Dist. Atty. Foley and his chief assistant, Frederick T. Doyle.

SHE'S BETTY No. 3.

It was understood the police learned she was in New York with a man answering to the description of her escort in the Chinese restaurant, about the time of the Reinstein murder. The couple are said to have been registered at a New York hotel either before or after the white slave leader was shot down here.

After being questioned the Smith girl was turned over to the probation department which held an old larceny complaint against her as she has violated parole. It is understood she will be sent to Sherborn.

Ethel Van Dyke, who was with her in the Norway st. home, was also questioned.

Twice before the authorities have questioned Betty Smith, the third Betty to appear in the case, but each time she was released.

From information officials now have, they are confident the girl will give valuable evidence.

The description of her escort, known in the underworld as "The Spieler," because of his addiction to dancing, has been broadcast and his arrest is expected shortly.

Word of the altercation between the couple came to the attention of Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle in a roundabout way. A lawyer told him of an incident witnessed in a Chinese restaurant by two young women, who were so impressed they repeated the story to him.

SHE THREATENED HIM

While in the restaurant for a cup of Chinese tea they noticed a couple, obviously under the influence of liquor, quarrelling violently.

The girl demanded the return of a watch and ring on the threat she would "tell the authorities what the man knew about the Reinstein killing."

Her escort shook her and their voices then dropped, but the two young women continued to watch them.

Dawes to Attend Meeting in Chicago

London, Oct. 3 (AP)—Ambassador Dawes and Mrs. Dawes will sail for New York on the steamship Ile de France, October 9, in order that the ambassador may attend a meeting of the finance committee of the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition, about the middle of the month.

The ambassador has been granted a special leave of absence.

Aimee in the Films in $200,000 Concern

Sacramento, Cal., Oct. 3 (INS)—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, has gone into the "movie" business. Incorporation papers were on file here today for the Angelus Productions, capitalized at $200,000. Mrs. McPherson's name headed the list of directors.

TEA DANCE TO FOLLOW BIG AIR MEET

Social Event to Feature Program; Many Entries Lined Up for Stunt Flying

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The air meet planned by the National Aeronautical Association, to be held at the Boston Airport Friday afternoon, is beginning to line up, and entries are being received every day by the chairman of the contest committee, Miss Lorraine DeFeon, former student at the airport.

While Miss DeFeon is not certain as to the exact number of ships that will enter each event, she states that there will be a sufficient number to make the show worth witnessing. The public is invited, free of charge.

Perhaps the most novel part of the whole proceedings will be the tea dance held immediately after the show. The dance, the first of its kind ever held at the port, will take place in the lounging room of Skyways, Inc.'s hangar. An orchestra composed of Harvard musicians will furnish the music.

When we were first informed as to the tea dance our impressions were that such an event was sure to flop. But later developments seem to point toward a capacity crowd.

There are bound to be wise cracks passed at every new stunt pulled, and the crack invented for this affair ran: "How about some grease monkey walking in with nine pounds of grime on him? Can he dance with a young lady who is all dressed up?" Well, that will have to be answered by those in charge.

VAL CHIC ON WING

One of the boys won't be here to take part in the races, and that's Val Chick of Gloucester, who is, on last reports, well on his way to Detroit in his Challenger. Chick decided that it was time for a little trip somewhere and made up his mind to give the Ford factory in Detroit, where the tri-motors grow the once over.

However, his absence will be made up by the presence of Danny Dugan, in town to collect his Department of Commerce transport license.

Danny stated that he would go down to New Bedford and fly back the ex-Harvard Flying Club ship now owned by "Red" Chapman, one of Danny's students. The Travel Air is fast, and Danny declared he can clean up the races for 100-horse power ships.

In addition to the races for 100 horsepower jobs, there will be races for Whirlwind-motored ships of 225 horsepower, and an unlimited horsepower race. Balloon bursting and bomb dropping will also be featured in the program.

It is hoped by the contest committee to have the Curtiss Conbacks, Adolph Backstrom, Al Sherman and Ralph Wickford, perform for the crowd of spectators. The trio is stunting at the Brockton Fair this week, you know.

Then comes the Tea Dance. Pawdon you?

ANDERSON WITH COLONIAL

With the highest honor of the federal government under his arm, Al Anderson is flying tri-motored Fords for Colonial Air Transport, in the position of co-pilot. His first run to New York was made just before the tough weather set in, and he is down there waiting for old man weather to let up so that the return can be made.

Anderson received the congratulations of the gang when his appointment was made known, and some of the boys even wired him their best wishes.

With the wind howling across the flats at 35 miles an hour, and the rain and fog making flying out of the question, the boys gathered in Bay State Flying Service's commodious shack, leaned on the oil stove and chewed about the old days, when the airport was small enough so that everybody knew everybody else.

Airport Super Eddie Edson dropped in long enough to announce that he was the proud father of a nine-pound baby boy, who will grow up to be a second Lindbergh. The boys showered their congratulations upon the super, and then Eddie stated that the storm was out of luck as far as blowing airplanes away.

"Instead of having practically every ship outside, we now have two or three, and the storm is out of luck," quoth Eddie.

THE QUESTION BOX—Questions pertaining to aviation will be answered in this department. Send them in.

Q.—Where can I inspect airplanes, either under construction or in actual use? Miss L. E. Boston.

A.—The aircraft repair shop of Beacon Air Service, Bennington st., Beachmont, is open to public inspection, and airplanes being manufactured at the Moth plant in Lowell. All the hangars at the Boston Airport can be looked over, also.

the electrons in other atoms as a dancer goes through a crowded ballroom. But why give anybody a headache?

Carrying this interesting fact with you. The radium now bombarding space will become lead in time, when its radio-active power is exhausted. All lead was once radium. But do not watch to see the change. It requires about five thousand million years.

Near the laboratory, young ladies work scientifically, in the manufacturing department, with fine gauges, testing to within one five-thousandth part of an inch various small pieces of machinery.

They wear pink dresses, fancy shoes, shiny silk stockings, permanent waves, no sleeves, nice sunburned arms, and they smile as they work.

You think of British women that once worked in the low galleries of coal mines, where it was impossible to stand upright. Crawling on their hands and knees along the tunnels, covered with rough coal, they dragged the little coal cars, chains, fastened around their necks, passing under their bodies were attached to the cars behind them. Working conditions have improved.

Mr. Vevelelth, vice-president of General Electric, in charge of engineering designing, tells you that testing with gauges is such monotonous work men cannot stand it. Women do not object to it, and their delicacy of touch makes them do it better than men.

Women's ability to endure monotonous tasks is due to their having taken care of children, on this earth, for a million years.

According to scientists, humanity is at least as old as that.

Nothing more monotonous than taking care of children. No man can stand it more than a few minutes.

In the giant turbine factory you study the making of power-producing machines, sent all over the world. Steam rushes through the turbine, striking against wheels made like the wheel of a windmill. The steam striking the wheels produces power, as the wind does.

One turbine now building goes to Henry Ford. It will produce 150,000 horsepower, after steam power has been transformed into electric power for convenient distribution, and cost one and a half million dollars. That great engine will produce millions of little Ford engines that will haul Americans billions of miles.

Modern machines are costly, but profitable.

One product of General Electric cost $650, produced with machines first used. Improved machinery now produces the same article for $60, less than one-tenth the original cost.

Scientific knowledge, embodied in that machinery, produces cheaper goods, better wages, bigger profits. Such is modern industry.

A great American organization is General Electric, of which Gerard Swope is president, with Mr. Young of "The Young Plan" chairman of the board.

It employs 100,000 men in its various plants, pays about $150,000,000 in wages annually, makes many things, from electric locomotives to lamps, producing as almost perfect imitation of sunlight.

Cotton Conspiracy Scented by Heflin

Washington, Oct. 3 (AP)—Senator Heflin, Democrat, Alabama, said before the Senate agriculture committee that he would specific ask an investigation by the Senate to determine whether there is "a conspiracy to depress the price of cotton."

"I myself think there is a conspiracy to depress the price of cotton," Heflin said. Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, told Heflin he would support the investigation if it were broadened to include wheat prices.

Roosevelt Sails

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, new governor general of Porto Rico, sailed today to assume office.

MRS. KENNEDY BARES NOTES OF PASTOR

Seattle, Oct. 3 (AP)—Letters and documents written by the Rev. H. H. Clark to Mrs. Minnie E. Kennedy were ready for introduction by the defense at the resumption of Clark's $50,000 breach of promise suit against the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist. He claimed Mrs. Kennedy's alleged refusal to marry him had wrecked his religious career and damaged his reputation.

John S. Robinson, defense counsel introduced letters written by Clark to Mrs. Kennedy and her companion, Miss Kay Burdick. One said in part: "If you are willing for your daughter, either to loan me a few hundred dollars at this stage of the unhappy affair, I will fade out of the picture." In another he said, "I am willing to drop out of it all if I can have only a little help just a small loan."

Rain Destroys Fire Menace in Maine

Augusta, Me., Oct. 3 (AP)—Reports that the rainfall extended over practically all of the Maine forestry district, averaging more than half an inch, were received today.

Thus relief was brought to the forests endangered by fires because of the long period of dry weather.

FREE FLIER WHO KILLED THREE AT CONEY

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—William H. Alexander, pilot for the Coastal Airways, Inc., was exonerated today on a charge of manslaughter entered against him September 7 when his seaplane, forced down by fuel shortage in a fog, killed two children and injured 11 others in landing on the beach at Coney Island. Judge Leo Healy, who held a "flying court" in Alexander's plane during the trial, wrote the opinion freeing the pilot of blame, but criticized the structure of the plane in that the pilot did not have a clear vision straight ahead.

Women Are Free!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Legally, politically and socially woman has been emancipated from those chains which bound her. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has exploded the ridiculous theory that forced the stigma of inferiority upon a sex.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against c te smoking by men and by women.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

'LIE' IS PASSED TO MANSFIELD BY LAWLER

The lie was passed to Frederick W. Mansfield, candidate for mayor of Boston, today by President Henry E. Lawler of the Democratic city committee.

In a letter to Mansfield, President Lawler wrote:

"As president of the Boston Democratic city committee I want to stamp the statement of Good Government Candidate Frederick W. Mansfield, wherein he charges me with being a paid henchman of former Mayor James M. Curley, as a deliberate lie.

"I have never received a penny for any service I have ever rendered the Democratic party nor from the candidate which the Democratic city committee has indorsed for mayor, James M. Curley.

WOMEN HOLD RALLY

"The endorsement of Mr. Curley by the Democratic City Committee was not solicited by Mr. Curley and represents a purely voluntary act upon the part of the membership."

In the last paragraph of his letter Mr. Lawler says:

"The impending shadow of a possible judicial appointment as a reward for carrying the Gov. George should prompt him to comfort himself with more dignity and a decent regard for truth."

For the first time in the history of Boston politics the Women's Democratic Committee held a monday rally today at 19 Beacon st., presided over by Mrs. Colin W. MacDonald, who urged the women to speed up registration. The speakers included Mr. Curley, who praised the women for the work they are doing.

UP TO ELECTORATE

The ex-mayor said:

"The fact that the city of Boston during the four years of my former administration as mayor was required to expend the sum of $200,000 in combatting unwarranted raids by public service corporations through state-created bodies is worthy of serious consideration.

"In 1925 the New England Telephone Co. requested authority to increase charges sufficient to provide one million dollars additional revenue for the company, but before the hearings in connection with the request for this additional increase had ended the sum was increased to nine million dollars and this was approved by the Massachusetts Public Utilities Commission.

"The recent demand of the Telephone Company for removal of coin boxes in certain places, coupled with the demand for the right to exact a service charge for meters by the Gas Company are most interesting.

"They represent a direct increase in the cost of living and can only be checked through an intelligent and alert electorate."

Drouth Prevails in West Part of State

Failure of the storm to penetrate as far west as the Berkshires and along parts of the Mohawk Trail, has accentuated the severe drouth in Western Massachusetts.

Today the State Department of Health learned that water users have been requested to conserve the supply, by refraining from using hose and in other ways. Williams College was ordered to curtail its water usage, including restricting shower baths for athletes.

GAS IMPERILS REVERE AS CAR BREAKS PIPE

Hundreds were threatened with injury or death in Revere today when a truck struck a high pressure gas pipe exposed in an excavation at Broadway and Reservoir avenue, releasing thousands of cubic feet of gas during a 20-minute period.

Traffic officer Daniel Sullivan, on duty in front of City Hall, smelled gas and ran to the excavation. As he reached it a cap gave way and a heavy flow shot into the air.

Suffering from partial asphyxiation, Sullivan telephoned to the station for help. Officers rushed to the scene, roped off the streets and kept away all pedestrians. Smokers were ordered to put out pipes and cigarettes.

Hundreds left their homes when the fumes blanketed the district. An emergency crew from the Suburban Gas Company hurried to the main and stopped the flow.

Sullivan was given first aid treatment at the police station and returned to duty.

Sheriff Horgan to Serve Civil Writs

Sheriff John A. Kelliher today announced the appointment of John J. Horgan to the office of deputy sheriff in charge of serving civil writs, filling the vacancy created by the resignation of Edmund P. Kelly.

Horgan has been in charge of the Charles Street Jail for the past 10 years. This position will be filled by James Morris, who was his assistant.

Contest Nominations Will End Saturday

With votes beginning to pile up and nominations still coming in, the Miss Majestic Popularity Contest settles down to a battle of ballots as the contest directors announce that the dead line for nominations will be midnight on Saturday of this week.

Dozens of Greater Boston women and girls are already in the race to see who will be chosen as Miss Majestic and win the prizes which go with the title.

Thousands of votes have been cast, but none of the contestants has yet achieved a lead too great to be overtaken. There is still a good opportunity for those who have yet entered, but after Saturday it will be too late.

Individuals and organizations are working hard for their favorites and are using every one of the eight ways in which votes can be secured. Dealers everywhere report great local activity, and on all sides there is interest and enthusiasm in the contest.

Concerning today, all Nelson Theaters are listed with the contest. All who purchase tickets at the Modern, Exeter Street Theaters in Boston, at the Rialto, Scollay Square Theater, Dorchester Theater or Mattapan, the Rivoli, Dudley, Showplace or Warren in Roxbury, the Jamaica in Jamaica Plain, the Rialto in Roslindale, the Regent in Norfolk Downs or the Realty in Wollaston, will be given vote coupons good for three nominations each.

Ballot boxes are located in the lobbies of all of these playhouses for the reception of ballots.

Vote coupons good for 50 votes each, entitling to be published in the Boston Evening American, and three coupons, entitling to 75,000 votes each, are being distributed today by Nelson Theaters.

THREE RADIO PRIZES

At the Modern, Exeter Street and Mattapan theaters tonight and the Hotel Statler Wednesday afternoon are being distributed coupons which only provide an opportunity to vote for the various contestants, but which entitle to the person casting the ballot the privilege of participating in a drawing this afternoon in which the prizes will be three Majestic Radios, one to the Cooking School by the makers of Majestic Radio.

The Majestic Mystery Maid continues her visits to the stores and shops of the various theaters who are co-operating in the contest, and continues to attract crowds wherever she appears.

At several places in the downtown area yesterday, in spite of the rainy weather, she was welcomed by groups of contestants who sought her advice as how to get votes and asked many questions about the prizes.

AWARDS FOR WINNERS

The question most asked was whether there would be three prizes for the winner. There will be.

Miss Majestic wins a trip to Hollywood, and will have a companion of her own selection, all expenses paid. This trip is to be arranged through the offices of the Allen Tours of Boston.

In addition she will be given a model 94 Majestic Radio and Photograph combination, having a retail value of $350. She will also receive a complete sports ensemble from the Barbara Stone Shops at Boston.

The second prize winner will be given a model 92 Majestic Radio and a complete sports ensemble.

Many other prizes have been announced and others are to be added as the contest progresses.

E. H. McCarthy, director of Miss Majestic contests for Grosbeau-now Co., makers of Majestic radio sets, says that the Boston contest has surpassed every contest held by his concern in the past and that it is receiving more enthusiastic support than has been accorded in any other city.

"I find," says McCarthy, "that Boston is swinging into this thing with amazing enthusiasm. Young girls and women have quickly grasped the idea that this is not a beauty contest or a test of skill. They seem to recognize at once just what we mean when we say that ballots, and ballots alone, will win the prizes which we offer.

GIRLS SHOW INGENUITY

"Already a number of contestants have displayed unusual ingenuity in getting others to work for them in getting the votes. This is as it should be. Every woman has friends. Many of them are club members or belong to societies of one sort or another.

"Others have a wide acquaintance in the business world. Some are the darlings of the stores or offices in which they are employed. All of these can, and will, I am sure, enlist the support of those who are interested in their success. That is the thing that piles up the votes.

Popularity is expressed in interest and willingness to help the ones in whom we are interested. It is the best way in the world to choose a contest winner. Good luck to all who are in the race, and may the winner have competition enough to know that she has won a brisk contest from a worthy field."

McCarthy also intimated that more surprises are in store for the contestants and that as soon as the nominations are closed a number of interesting events are in prospect.

New Entries in Miss Majestic Contest

Lilly Waugh — Dorothy Baxter — Grace M. Giglio

Recent nominations in the Miss Majestic Popularity Contest include Grace M. Giglio of East Boston, Lilly Waugh of Malden and Dorothy Baxter of Somerville. Entries for the contest will close Saturday and none of the many already enrolled has a sufficient lead to discourage newcomers, who are entering the "Battle of Ballots" daily. The contest is gripping the imagination of Greater Boston and the Majestic Mystery Maid and contest officials are being plied with inquiries by those already entered and many prospective contestants.

TELLS OF RAID IN SUIT FOR HEART BALM

Description of a raid on a Boston hotel room, where he alleged he found his wife and the defendant, was a high spot in the testimony of Walter T. Doyle of Cedar st., Roslindale, in his $50,000 heart balm suit against Ernest E. Colopy, New Bedford and Hartford auto salesman.

As a result of the raid, it was testified, Doyle was granted a divorce and custody of a child.

Doyle's charges were supported by Sergt. Orrington Waugh and Patrolman Welch of the Back Bay police station, who accompanied the plaintiff on the raid.

They said that Colopy answered their knock on the door. Mrs. Doyle, they said, was in the room.

Doyle testified that he was married in September, 1919, and that one child was born.

In 1922, while an auditor for the Exchange Trust Company, he was sentenced to two and one-half years at Deer Island. He said he served 13 months.

For a while, he said, Mrs. Doyle "acted fine," saw him twice a week at the island, and wrote him every day for eight months.

Later, he said, she cut down her visits to one a week, and finally dropped them altogether. The letters also stopped, he said.

On his release, just before Thanksgiving, 1924, when he went to embrace her, Doyle said, his wife brushed him aside and said, "Hi, there."

Doyle said he never met Colopy personally and the first time he saw him was on a night in March, 1926, at the home of his wife's mother.

He had gone there to spend the evening, he related, but before long his wife asked him if he would mind going home.

Physicians Favor Use of Cascara

Doctors who warn against the use of violent, habit-forming purgatives will tell you that cascara is one of the gentlest and most beneficial laxatives known to science. Cascarets are nothing but pure cascara, sweetened with cane sugar and flavored with licorice. You can take them any time that Nature needs a little help with the process of elimination—and never experience any discomfort, nausea or unpleasant after effects.

You can easily tell when you are suffering from faulty elimination. You feel listless, out of sorts, perhaps your tongue is coated or you have a bilious, headachy feeling. Cascarets will clear up this sluggish feeling every time and soon have your system functioning as it should. You needn't hesitate to give them to children or old folks either.

Cascarets always act, and they always act the same way; gentle but thorough. They don't stir up the stomach or upset the system, but they cleanse the entire thirty feet of bowels in one comfortable, thorough action that leaves the system sweet and clean. You'll wake up feeling like a new person; tongue uncoated, breath sweetened, eyes bright, appetite on edge, life worth living again!

Take a delicious, candy Cascaret the next time you have that sluggish feeling—or give them to the children when they are out of sorts. Full medical endorsement proves the principle of Cascarets is right.

Violet Rays of Sunshine

not "artificial treatment"—make OLD GOLD
. . . a better and a smoother cigarette

OLD GOLD brought about a great change in smoking habits. It gave smokers a new freedom of enjoyment . . . without any forbidden limits and without the need for self-denial.

The man who used to say "I can't smoke until after lunch . . . my throat is sensitive in the morning" now finds that he can "light up" whenever he pleases. For his morning OLD GOLD has no more throat-scratch than his breakfast omelet.

Likewise all those who have to guard their throats . . . salesmen, singers, actors, public-speakers and the like . . . no longer have to stint their smokes, for OLD GOLD is as free of throat irritants as a glass of spring water.

Better tobaccos did it . . . naturally good tobaccos . . . extra-prime leaf made irritation-free by the violet rays of sunshine . . . not by "artificial treatment."

If you like food that is naturally good, instead of food made good by "artificial treatment" you're sure to prefer OLD GOLD'S natural tobacco smoothness. Try a package, and get a vote of thanks from both your throat and taste.

Women's Clubs Form Junior Department

For the first time, the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs has an organized junior membership department. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, Jr., of Cliftondale, a committee of eight clubwomen selected from all over the state, will tackle the problem.

Meeting at the Hotel Vendome [illegible] importance of the special department created this year was stressed and plans laid for a concentrated network of junior membership in clubs throughout the Commonwealth.

When a junior is not a junior, but eligible to senior membership in a club is one phase of the tickish project.

While club leaders have continually stressed the need for young women in club work and the importance of junior memberships as an impetus for older women to gather under club banners, there nevertheless is a feeling of antagonism in various clubs against the distinct junior club. Many feel that the club will become factional that two clubs will live within one and a barrier of ages will be set up.

The Junior Membership Department met separately today at the hotel. The committee includes Mrs. J. J. Bessell of Springfield; Mrs. Charles L. Horner, Quincy; Mrs. Joseph Lelyveld, Rockland; Mrs. B. Howard Lester, West Newton; Mrs. Melvin F. Morrill, Swampscott; Mrs. William E. Norcross, Chatham, and Mrs. Sumner Remick, Reading.

This department activity will be extended throughout the district personal speaking tours conducted by committee members.

Clubwomen from all over the State gathered at the Vendome to attend the formal opening of the club year.

Mrs. Azel A. Packard, state president, called the [illegible] to order at 10 o'clock. The initial get-together of clubwomen today marked only served to renew acquaintance but familiarized the new department chairmen with duties outlined for the fall season by Mrs. Packard.

Simultaneously, the club institutes got under way with Mrs. Thomas J. Walker of Whitinsville presiding. Club institutes have become a permanent institution with the State federation and a clearing house, to which the women may bring problems of every size and description pertinent to the club routine.

The department of Public Welfare now includes five subdivisions as follows: Community Service, Mrs. Fred L. Cross, chairman; Cooperation with War Veterans, Mrs. Paul A. Peters; Mothercraft and Child Welfare, Mrs. May Iliff Dickinson Kimball; Public Health, Dr. Anna C. Palmer; chairman, and Social Welfare, including Mental Hygiene, Correction, Philanthropy, Wage Earners, and Protective Measures under the chairmanship of Mrs. Albert Bradley Carter.

The first fall meeting of the group takes place in the Assembly hall at 20 Union pk. Mrs. George W. T. Dowling, the new president has a special message. Miss Anne Anderson and Mrs. A. B. Homer are the evening's hostesses.

Standing committees appointed for the ensuing year are:

American home, Mrs. James J. Hickey; Americanization, Miss Lillian Peck; art, Mrs. Esther G. Kurtzman; drama, Mrs. William B. King; education, Mrs. Agatha Bazoux; federation topics, Miss Marie B. Shepard; legislation and literature, Mrs. A. B. Homer; music, Mrs. Caroline V. DeFalmir; press and publicity, Miss Louise T. Ogden; public health, Miss Mabel Houghton.

Plans are rapidly being made for a Puritan Fair to be held at the Hotel Statler, Thursday, November 7, under the chairmanship of Mrs. James A. Kane. Those who have made the carnivals of the past successes are concentrating their efforts that past events may be eclipsed. A bridge and fashion show are to be featured.

Mrs. Walter L. Came announces that a Pilgrim Gift House will be open every Tuesday in October for the sale of gifts and Christmas cards at her home in 11 Williams st., Brookline.

WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB OF MASSACHUSETTS

On Thursday morning, October 10, at 11 a. m., the second annual meeting of the season will be held in the Assembly Hall of the club house. Speakers of the morning are to be Lieut.-Governor William S. Youngman and Miss Elizabeth H. Hadley.

Mr. Youngman will speak on "Women's Contribution to Politics."

Son Sole Heir to $400,000 Estate

New York, Oct. 3—Thomas J. Gaines, of North st., Greenwich, Ct., is the sole beneficiary of the estate of his mother, Mrs. Martha A. Gaines, who died May 5, 1927, and which is valued at $400,000 net, in a transfer tax appraisal filed.

The papers showed that Mrs. Gaines gave to her son practically all of her estate by deed on 1 assignment prior to her death. The estate is composed principally of stocks and bonds.

Vanished Girl Sought by Police

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 3—An extensive search being made by the police for 13-year-old Marguerite Vennie, of Beech st., who is reported missing.

The girl walked out of the house leaving a note asking that no hunt be made for her. The girls disappearance was reported to the police and a description of Miss Vennie was sent out to all officers.

Nurse Gives Blood to Save Patient

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 3—That she might save the life of her patient, Mrs. Hilda B. Campbell of Candia, a nurse, gave a quart of her blood, and the patient, Mrs. Paul Holt of Nashua, although still in a serious condition, is expected to recover.

Mrs. Campbell, who is a native of Beverly, obtained her training at the Lynn Hospital.

Must Return $1000 Protection "Fee"

Bangor, Me., Oct. 3 (AP)—Former State Senator Ralph L. Perkins, who Monday was sentenced to from two to four years in state prison on charges of receiving and attempting extortion, must pay Claude A. Noyes, of Orono $1000 under the decision of Justice William H. Patrangall today.

Justice Patrangall, in holding that Perkins should return the $1000 which Noyes alleged he paid him as protection against prosecution on a liquor charge, termed it a clear case of holdup.

Better Values at Ferdinand's

Three reasons why values are better: First, we are away from high rents and high taxes; second, we sell nothing but dependable furniture, and third, because of our large volume concentrated on quality merchandise. These reasons make it possible for us to sell at lower prices. It will pay you to visit our stores and compare these money-saving values with what you can obtain elsewhere.

A Safe Store---

Poor merchandise has no place in this store. We do not spend large sums of money to advertise cheap, flashy furniture which is made merely to sell and lasts only a year or so.

Your Fathers and Mothers and Grandparents bought their goods at this old reliable store established by Frank Ferdinand in 1869. We still do business in the same way with the same dependable quality which will give lifetime satisfaction—the same as when your Grandparents bought here.

Every price tag is plainly marked. We have only one kind, the best quality; and only one price, the lowest in New England for quality merchandise.

Barthelmess Closes Contract With First National Company for Two Film Plays Yearly

MONTE BLUE FIGHTING HARD LUCK

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3—One of the silliest contracts signed this year is that of Richard Barthelmess and First National. Dick, according to Hal B. Wallis and D. S. Graham Baker, bosses of the film company, will make only two pictures a year but those two will be there is the tale.

He will receive just as much for the two productions as he formerly did for four features. The salary First National doesn't want to lose, but is losing it, puts Barthelmess in the John D. Rockefeller class.

Dick has handled his career with admirable discretion. He has been with First National for three years and instead of leaving the company when, for a time his pictures weren't so good, he set out to get better scripts and to make better pictures.

The result was that this last year he has had one success after another. The talkies haven't hurt him in the least. "Weary River" and "Drag" have only strengthened his position.

WILL GO TO EUROPE.

This two-year arrangement suits Dick down to the ground. When he finishes work on "Son of the Gods" about October 15 he and Mrs. Barthelmess will leave immediately for Europe to be gone five months.

When a feller needs a friend is understood these days Monte Blue, who has his grin and bear his misfortune. He broke three ribs doing stunts in "Murder Will Out" and was put out of commission so that he cannot go on with the picture.

Jack Mulhall has been put into the lead role in his place. Lila Lee and Noah Beery are playing important roles. Clarence Badger directs. Lila moves to the Fox studio just as soon as she finishes at First National. That girl doesn't have time to even change her mind these days the way they are moving her around.

HUGHES STOCK JOKE.

There is one subject that Howard Hughes avoids. He'd rather not talk about "Hell's Angels." You can't blame him for being a little bit wary and choosing to talk about other pictures when you consider that he has become the joke laugh of filmland and one of those perennial things that re-flowers every few months.

Then tell me now that "Hell's Angels" really has a chance of being finished some day. Sally Blane has been put into the talkie role that Greta Nissen had in the silent picture and Lena Malena has been given an important part.

Ben Lyons seems to be the sole survivor of the wreck of this film Hesperus. Wouldn't it be a joke if the picture should turn out to be one of our top-notchers?

JOLSON'S NEW PLAN

There will be no long wearisome speeches for tired people at the opening of Al Jolson's picture "Say It with Songs." Al says he has watched the audiences try to be polite and stay awake for the whole show so he has decided on something new.

The players will be introduced before the picture is shown. That will be something of a blow to the actors who slumber in at the 11th hour. The player who wants to be introduced will have to get to the theater on time, and those who want to hear the Jolson witticisms also.

Hollywood premieres have been getting later and later, so it's high time someone took a hand.

MISS GARON ON STAGE.

Pauline Garon has joined the cast of "Bad Babies." She plays the lead and that means she will go to Chicago and San Francisco with the company.

Polly has been having bad luck in motion pictures. Time after time another was held out to her, only to be given to some other actress.

With tears in her eyes she laments that producers will not realize she can do something besides flapper parts. "I'm tired of them," Polly, "I will be playing flapper roles until I have wrinkles down to my toes."

Suspicion of Hollywood collected a number. Charlie Chaplin and George Bliss enjoyed a three hours over their coffee at Henry's restaurant. Lolita Torres calling on her daughter, Mary Davies, returned to Paris with John Favre on the same 'bi, dressed in a green sport suit and wearing orchids. Ted Lewis rehearsing at the Ambassador for the big time opening Monday night. Wesley Ruggles saying no reason to his friends before he leaves for New York, where he will make a picture for R. K. O. That's all to say. See you tomorrow.

"Paris" to Be Seen Soon

"Paris," in which Irene Bordoni stars, is in the final stages of editing at First National. The lyrics in the production have been written by Al Bryan and set to music by Eddie Ward. Miss Bordoni is supported by Jack Buchanan, the English comedian.

and fetching manners. Dorothy and Hanna Kenny, Sisters Sally and Mary Lou Shelton, Dorothy Hall, Jeanne White, Irene Bellet, Betty Alice, George White, Jean Scandals, started them in his lavish shows and big time vaudeville circuit when he was a long time with Roger Wolf Kahn's Revue. Radio fans know them from their broadcasts over WJZ and WEAF, as well as other New York stations. The privilege of singing a number with Byrd's Antarctic Expedition was theirs, and is the highlight of their radio experiences. The Williams Sisters are famed for their recordings of what is popularly known as "hot tunes."

Nicholas Young

"INTERLUDE" TOOK 2 YEARS

EUGENE O'NEILL spent more than two years in writing "Strange Interlude," now at the Quincy Theater in Quincy. He began and finished it at his home in Bermuda. The revision was done in New York before and during long rehearsal periods, which stretched over eight weeks instead of the customary four, to the Theater Guild.

Author Yes, it was filled with asides, the spoken mental speeches of the characters.

Long? Yes, it would take twice as long to perform as the average play.

Difficult to produce? Enormously so for the director and for the actors. Actors speaking their mental speeches might not be convincing.

The Theater Guild, which is presenting the play with the New York cast headed by Judith Anderson, Glenn Anders and Lynn Fontanne, has revised the asides and the entire action of the play to fit the Guild directors. It is remarkable. They were told on all sides that they were crazy to think of producing such a play.

Philip Moeller, its director, worked excellently, O'Neill for many days in a small office so that between them they might thrash out the problems to be met. They argued back and forth over many issues yet always came to an amicable understanding.

M-G-M Plans Picture From Strobeim Story

M-G-M is planning to produce a picture from an original story by Eric von Stroheim. It is expected to be included in this year's program.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WHILE the stern New England character is not real to quite as forbidding as the hard-working dramatist discovered it under the austere canopy of Plymouth Rock, Jules Barry has managed, in his own way, to make something more than just mere comedy out of "Courage." Perhaps the growing talents of Janet Beecher may have something to do with it. In any event, we sat with this play at the Wilbur, hoping for nothing better than good fun, what really rolled across the footlights was a giggle, a laugh, and finally, some smashing entertainment.

NATURALLY Mr. Barry's quips—and they kept popping up at unexpected moments left a good many Puritan audiences dodging between sighs and fire. The playful drama of the days when times taken most seriously, was thrifty, hard shelled New Englanders.

Often he has fussed around with the end product, mixing in a generous helping of Yankee humor, but he has never taken possession of the final stage. Miss Beecher, a veteran of many decisive campaigns and a hit called Junior Blake, give Barry's play something he has been minded playgoer to take with full enjoyment.

CURIOUSLY enough, this story of a widowed mother with seven children to support and educate on small funds, is crowded with all the elements of good comedy, while tragedy in the form of persistent creditors lurk in the background. Not in a long time, thank goodness, have greedy tradesmen furnished so much human comedy. And they do not even appear in the cast.

AT first glance you will decide that Mr. Barry, prolific author of light comedy, must have learned his lesson in New England, for there is a generous quantity of smart kidding about Puritan ways. Boisterous in general to hold your attention and keep you in lively humor. And then he plunges into drama of the sternest texture. When Miss Beecher, as the harassed widow, takes her turn, you know that even persistent humorists—or satirists—may wield a heavy hitch. Mr. Barry does this with no quibbling reserve. Miss Beecher, his mouthpiece, flares forth gladly and lunges in a job that really may be set down as the season's best trick at making a playwright worth his omelette and coffee.

"COURAGE" starts like a farce, but moves swiftly into real drama. For the native playgoer it is impressively local. You can almost detect the precipitate the thought that New Englanders prefer profit to virtue. Miss Beecher's task is perplexing, but it is loaded with audience sympathy. Her support by the boy named Blake is exceptional, as theatrically correct under the circumstances, and provides a large part of the entertainment. Here certainly follows the play with an honest essence of truth.

WHENEVER one of these rolling playwrights can catch an audience unawares and impress it with the home town values there is little left for the patient reviewer to do but report a good job well done. "Courage" is all of that. It reveals more engaging comedy than the theater usually provides, and tops it off with local color.

Additions to the cast of "The Lone Star Ranger," which is in production in Arizona, are Fred Chase and Oliver Eckhardt. This is the Zane Grey story directed by A. F. Erickson and features George O'Brien and Sue Carol.

HAL SKELLY A TROUPER

HAL SKELLY, as Skid, the happy-go-lucky hero of "The Dance of Life" taken directly from the stage success, "Burlesque," offers one of the most sympathetic portraitures ever presented on the screen. "The Dance of Life will be the main attraction Saturday at four of the Publix theaters, Scollay Sq., Capitol, Commonwealth ave.; Central Sq., Cambridge, and Strand, Dorchester.

Skelly, new to the screen, is, nevertheless, a trouper in every sense of the word. When he was chosen for the part of Skid in "Burlesque" he came into his own. He created the role of Skid on the New York stage and, in "The Dance of Life" he has immortalized it in moving pictures.

Hal Skelly started trouping when he was a youngster in Davenport, Ia. and his first professional appearance was on a donkey in the street parade of the Sells and Ross Dog and Pony show. Since that time he has trouped with burlesque shows, minstrel shows, musical comedies and circuses.

CLASSY BILL FOR MOVIE FANS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

THE menu offered film-lovers in the programs for the coming week is full of promise of excellent entertainment. Opening at the Metropolitan today is "Honky Tonk," with no less a bright star than Sophie Tucker, whirlwind success of the vaudeville circuit. Miss Tucker has personality and ability to put across her "red hot mamma" songs. Supporting her will be Lila Lee, the winsome, Audrey Ferris, Wampas baby star, and George T. Duryea. There are numerous song hits in the "talkie-singie."

TO the State on Monday comes that apostle of male sex appeal, John Gilbert in "His Glorious Night." It is a romantic comedy into which Gilbert may be expected to fit like a kid glove. For leading lady Gilbert has Katherine Dale Owen; and there are several old-time stage artists—Nance O'Neil, Richard Carle and Hedda Hopper.

* * *

IF perfect city there be, in point of beauty Havana is it. Beginning Saturday, the Fox picture "The Girl from Havana" will be screened at the Keith-Albee, and an item of interest is that many of the scenes were filmed at the Cuban capital. Lola Lane and Paul Page heys the leads.

* * *

THAT good show "Broadway" soon bids farewell at the Park, to be succeeded by "College Love," opening Saturday. "The Dance of Life" opens the same day at the Public Four, including the Scollay. Those sterling attractions, "The Cock-Eyed World" at the New B. F. Keith's and "The Gold Diggers of Broadway" at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia, hold over for another week.

* * *

THE Fenway swings out "on its own" Saturday and starts in its new life with a picture that should prove a good talkie, to judge by the success of Jeanne Eagels in her first film, "The Letter." The new show is "Jealousy," with Miss Eagels starring. The showing will be of the greater interest because of the stage play of the same name now in town.

'Jealousy' Star

JEANNE EAGELS
Famed stage star will be seen in the screen version of "Jealousy," starting Saturday at the Fenway. It is her second talkie.

In the latter appear but two characters, but in the movie there are six. Here will be excellent opportunity to make comparison of stage and screen portrayals of the same drama.

Fox Chief on Duty After Operation

The temporary offices of Major John Zanft, vice president and general manager of the Fox Theaters Corporation, the largest organization of its kind in the world, which for the past week have been maintained at the Park West Hospital, in New York, have been discontinued and Major Zanft and his staff are once more back at their official headquarters in the Roxy Theater Building for good. Major Zanft was at the hospital for an operation for removal of his tonsils.

"U" Serial

Louise Lorraine will portray the heroine in "The Lightning Express," a railroad story by Frank H. Spearman, which will be made in 10 episodes. There will be both silent and sound version of the serial.

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

CHARLEY HARRIS, for many years the landlord of the Longacre Theater for Lawrence Weber, is to make his bow as a manager of the good old drama on Friday night of this week. Charley's first production, as already has been proclaimed from the housetops on Broadway, will be "I-told-you-so," for press and public agreed with her that her first talkie is one of the best entertainments she had thus far offered.

The photoplay will be screened at Loew's State the week of Oct. 11.

Miss Swanson plans to stay in the East until October 10, then returns to Hollywood to put words into the mouth of "Queen Kelly."

FIRST TALKIE ELATES GLORIA

GLORIA SWANSON, wonderfully refreshed by her European vacation, is in high spirits as a result of the ovation both she and her picture, "The Trespasser," received at its London premiere. She may well smile her "I-told-you-so," for press and public agreed with her that her first talkie is one of the best entertainments she had thus far offered.

The photoplay will be screened at Loew's State the week of Oct. 11.

Miss Swanson plans to stay in the East until October 10, then returns to Hollywood to put words into the mouth of "Queen Kelly."

PERIL IN WOMEN PARTY VICTORY, SAYS PRIEST

Washington, Oct 3 (INS)—Rev John A. Ryan, addressing the National Council of Catholic Women, said "Triumph of the principles of the National Women's party would mean the destruction of the family and of the race."

Pointing out that the constitutional grant of equal rights to women would prevent legislative restrictions upon the liberty of women in labor ranks as well as in every other field of activity, Father Ryan said:

"Existing regulations of woman in labor are, in a sense, a discrimination against them as well as a special benefit for them.

"Even if the number of women deprived of employment through protective labor laws was 10 times as great as it actually is, the balance of good would be decidedly in favor of the legislation.

"No law having a wide application benefits every individual whom it affects. In most cases the minority which suffers incidental disadvantages is far greater than it is in relation to protective labor for women.

"Objection of the National Woman's Party to labor laws for women is based upon the assumption that such legislation puts upon women the stamp of illegal inferiority. Of course, this contention is without merit, either in logic or common sense.

"The grievance cherished by the members of the National Women's Party seems to arise not so much from a realistic view of the facts as from a feeling of resentment against the male sex."

DEFENDS RISE IN BANK RATE

Brighton, Eng., Oct. 3 (AP)—The conference of the Labor party, in session here, today heard from Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, a defense of the Bank of England's recent increase in the discount rate.

Mr. Snowden said it was clear for months a financial situation was developing which would require strong measures to avert certain otherwise unavoidable consequences.

"We are approaching a very menacing situation," he said. "The rise in the bank rate was under the existing conditions, the only means we had of restoring unfavorable exchanges and regulating the basis of credit."

He said the time of greatest stress on the exchanges was approaching, when it would be necessary to meet payments for food and other commodities, and if sterling was at 4 discount the cost of raw material would be increased considerably and would be reflected on export trade.

Greeks Order Warships

Athens, Greece, Oct. 3 (AP)—The Grecian Government today ordered from Italy two destroyers to cost each $1,125,000.

The Weather

For Boston and Vicinity—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday, slightly cooler tonight; fresh southwest and west winds.

For Southern New England—Cloudy preceded by occasional rain tonight; slightly cooler tonight, Friday partly cloudy; fresh to strong southwest and west winds.

For Northern New England—Cloudy with rain tonight and probably in Maine Friday morning; cooler in the east; strong fresh, possibly strong, southwest winds tonight shifting to west and colder.

For Eastern New York—Cloudy preceded by light rain in south portion tonight and Friday, partly cloudy in north portion; cool; fresh west and northwest winds.

DUE FRIDAY FORECAST

Steamers departing today for European ports have fine prospects, with moderate to strong westerly winds, shifting to the Grand Banks.

'Baby Tramp' Back Home

1930 French Car Built to Please Madame

Paris, Oct. 3 (AP)—French makers in their Paris automobile salon which opened today, present a line 1930 cars as the best they can do in the way of quality, comfort and handled ears, comfortable to ride in and pleasant to look at.

The French woman, they agree, is about to take over the buying of the family car, and they are out to please her.

Six-cylinder cars are thoroughly established now. Fours, however, still predominate. Citroen, famous in mass production, is expected to make twice as many fours as sixes.

Two silent speeds, third and fourth are the center of interest. The American trend appears to have set in here as well as [illegible] according to woman's taste.

Motors run small with high speed and high compression, for [illegible] cents a horsepower [illegible] taxes based on [illegible] horsepower. Moving Picture Pioneer Dead at 75

New York Oct 3 (AP) Rich G. Hollaman, a pioneer in presenting motion pictures in America, and former president of the Eden Musee formerly one of the sights of New York is dead at his Brooklyn home, at the age of 75.

He imported films from Europe and was credited with being the first man to show motion pic ure publicly in this country. Mr. Hollaman was a native of England and as a choir boy sang at the wedding ceremony of the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII. He came to New York in 1875.

Hudson, N. Y., Raid Nets $500,000 Haul

Hudson, N. Y., Oct. 3 (INS)—Thirteen men were arrested and beer and equipment valued at $500,000 were seized by federal agents in a raid on the old Evans Ale Brewery.

The brewery operated under a federal permit granted when Palmer Canfield was administrator of the Albany district.

Twenty agents worked their way inside by deceiving themselves in a truck after [illegible] the driver.

MRS. KENNEDY BARES NOTES OF PASTOR

Seattle Oct 3 (AP)—Letters and documents written by the Rev. H Clark to Mrs Minnie E Kennedy were ready for introduction by the defense at the resumption of Clark's $50,000 breach of promise suit against the mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist. It claimed Mrs Kennedy's alleged refusal to marry him had wrecked his religious career and damaged his reputation.

John S Robinson defense counsel introduced letters written by Clark to Mrs Kennedy and her companion Miss Kay Bottles. One was in part: "If you are [illegible] to my daughter, either loan me a few hundred dollars or stop of the unhappiness. I will face out of the pulpit another week and I am willing to drop out of all if I can borrow a little help just a [illegible]."

DAY, OUT OF JAIL, CELEBRATES

Washington Oct 3 (INS)—H Mason Day, debonair young ac of Harry F Sinclair in jury-shadow [illegible] obtaining oil concessions [illegible] lands, walked out of the [illegible] jail early this morning, and into the arms of welcoming friends who threw a big dinner at a prominent hotel.

Day served a little more than three and a half months of a four-month sentence for jury shadowing.

Jaunty and well-groomed, Day was obviously glad to leave prison.

"My chief regret," he said, "is that I'm leaving Sinclair behind. Before God, I committed no crime and my conscience is clear. I spent the time in jail for absolutely nothing."

Day is to be married shortly to Miss Dorothy Fuhrmann, a Washington girl.

Last Day of Novenas to "Little Flower"

As today is the feast of St. Therese, known as "The Little Flower," the novenal novenas for her honor which have been in progress in various Boston churches during the past nine days, will be brought to a close with special ceremonies.

At the chapel of the Carmelite Convent, 61 Mt. Pleasant ave., Roxbury, mass will be celebrated at 8:30 a. m., followed by a solemn high mass at 9 a. m.

Don't Get Idea From This That Bauer Is a Dead One

Mayor Rader of Dunn will attend the Brockton Fair tomorrow even though he may have to dress up in an undertakers funeral suit.

Since he let the public know a few days ago that he could not attend the fair because of not having a cutaway suit and tall silk hat, the Mayor has received various offers of assistance.

Today Michael Hayes, prominent undertaker, offered his own personal outfit, which includes the white gloves the undertaker uses in handling the caskets.

Tom manning, editor of the Brockton Times has offered to send a complete outfit, and to have a brass band meet the crusading mayor at the railroad station and escort him to the stand.

RALSTON IDEAL FOOD

YOU'LL notice how many times lately the subject of lectures, newspaper and magazine articles is the nutritional and body-building value of whole wheat. Doctors, food experts and scientists are enjoining the goodness of whole wheat as an essential to health and the importance to young and old alike. Whole wheat in really concentrated form, which is obtainable only in Ralston Wheat Foods, delivers the prescription in an easy one to take.

The best solution to the whole wheat problem is Ralston Wheat Flakes, delightfully tempting and different. They are flakes from the choicest sun-ripened whole wheat, then toasted crisp. Everybody likes them because all the natural goodness of wheat is there, left in.

Ralston Wheat Flakes are really a delicious cereal and I do hope you will give your little tots a bowl of this nutritious food, which is so delicious, for breakfast, lunch or supper. I'll send you a leaflet telling many ways to serve Ralston Wheat Flakes and I hope to hear from you. I'll send you, further, Mother's Manual published by the Ralston Purina Company, containing not only delicious recipes showing new ways to serve whole wheat, but health and weight charts for boys and girls, suggestions on the care and prevention of colds, play suggestions for rainy days, table showing the normal development of babies and baby growth chart and first-aid suggestions.

USE RINSO FOR EASY WASHING

DO you know that this week you can hang out a whiter and brighter wash and spare yourself much of the hard work of washing if you will soak your clothes first in lukewarm water and Rinso the granulated laundry soap. Even in hard water Rinso will lather at once into thick, [illegible] suds and in the use of Rinso in each of the [illegible] baskets will be put into [illegible] stage of the [illegible] loosened and float off in the rinse. No more hard rubbing. You the annual Martha Lee Cooking and School [illegible]

no boiling to beat the [illegible] and waste fuel. Just soak in the Rinso suds and rinse for a white wash. And don't forget the importance of dissolving soap powder and soap flakes into solutions before using.

I've seen so many people put their clothes into the soaking water and then sprinkle the dry Rinso over them or possibly just sprinkle the powder into the lukewarm water before putting the clothes in. Both ways are incorrect. Rinso must be quickly dissolved in boiling water, then diluted with cold water to the desired temperature.

Through the courtesy of Lever Brothers Co., Cambridge, Mass., a package of Rinso in each of the [illegible] baskets will be put into [illegible] stage of the Statler ballroom at [illegible] Rinso must be used in boiling water to get the best results.

"43,040 housewives like you helped to perfect BOND Bread"

—says Mrs. Lilla Pauline Cross at the American Cooking School

BOND BAKERS asked housewives themselves what made bread home-like. And 43,040 housewives sent samples of their best home-baked bread to prove that home-like texture and flavor depended upon the quality and purity of the ingredients used, and upon thorough baking. Year-in and year-out, adherence to the example of these housewives has made Bond Bread the most-asked-for loaf in the world.

Sugar in the balanced diet for ACTIVE, GLOWING Health

Let Sugar as a flavorer lead the way to more kinds of food and more enjoyment

Your markets abound in inviting, wholesome foods. Throughout the entire year you can supply your table with a choice variety at a reasonable cost.

There is a host of delicious vegetables. Many are rich in sugar and how they appeal to you, taste! But there are those which will become much more appetizing if you add a dash of sugar in cooking them. For example—carrots, cabbage and tomatoes take on new goodness when they are cooked with sugar.

For full enjoyment try stewed fresh fruits (sweetened to taste) and the many kinds of delicious canned fruits.

Jams and jellies with meats and vegetables make the whole meal taste better. And how long since have you had an apple or squash pie for dessert?

Don't forget the pleasure of eating cereal for breakfast. Rediscover the enjoyment in this nourishing food by sprinkling it with sugar, then adding milk or cream.

Do you drink a pint of milk a day? (A quart for children.) Get in the habit of drinking eggnogs and milk shakes—both made with your favorite flavoring and a dash of sugar. Remember too, that cocoa and chocolate is the main ingredient in world-famed puddings and desserts.

When you serve eggs include bacon on which has been sprinkled a little sugar. It turns out much crisper and more flavorful.

To increase the pleasure in eating is to get more joy out of living. Think of sugar when you want delicious flavor in food. The Sugar Institute.

Increased Dividends Set Record

Total for Nine Months 1436; Payments in Stock More Popular

By B. C. Forbes

B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—In the first nine months of this year no fewer than 1436 improved dividend announcements have been made by American corporations. This contrasts with only 955 during the first three-quarters of last year, 555 in 1927 and 669 in 1926.

September's total was 174, making a very favorable comparison with 135 last year and 104 two years ago.

Better dividend payments, it will thus be seen, have been in some measure responsible for the advance in many stocks.

Only 91 companies have taken unfavorable dividend action this year, against 117 in the first nine months of 1928, and 131 in 1927.

The most notable feature of this year's dividend record has been the frequent resort to the payment of stock dividends. They have totaled 255, contrasted with only 87 a year ago, and 99 in the first three-quarters of 1927.

So far, indeed, have stock dividends become that certain Washington politicians have denounced them as subterfuges by wealthy capitalists to obviate income tax payments. The fact is, however, that stock distributions have lost some of their charm during recent months. In not a few instances the market quotation for a stock has not been improved at all by the announcement of a stock payment.

Utility corporations have utilized the stock dividend more freely than the railroads or industrials, the reason given being that utility companies are constantly in need of new capital to cope with needed expansion.

Stock rather than cash dividends appear to be the coming thing vogue also among investment trusts, the new phenomenon in American finance.

More companies have made their debut in the dividend ranks this year than ever before. This is ominously to the organization of an extraordinary number of new enterprises last year and in 1928. Approximately five hundred investment trusts alone have entered the field, and many of them were also to begin dividends immediately. Initial dividend payments for the last nine months have aggregated 440, compared with 329 in the corresponding period last year, and only 154 two years ago.

There is noticeable, too, a greater disposition to declare extra disbursements than to make increases in the regular rates, suggesting that many boards of directors are not certain that present prosperity will be permanently enjoyed.

Vincent Club to Give Out List of New Members on November 3

ONE MONTH FROM TODAY on November 3, the elections to the Vincent Club, most exclusive of all social organizations, will be made known—and great will be the elation of those favored with membership. At the general meeting of the club this week the new members were voted upon and the result of the election is awaited with the utmost eagerness by many debutantes. The club play also has been decided upon and announcement of the cast is only a matter of days. Early planning of this play, the chief work of the club each season, will enable talented performers to study for a definite goal during the winter months. Mrs. Henry Parkman is president.

NOVEMBER 5 is the date chosen for the Boston appearance of Miss Bertha Wendell, harpist. Miss Wendell will be heard at a concert in Symphony Hall under the auspices of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union. Miss Wendell has been a pupil of Miss Mabel Lewis Corey, Miss Edna Phillips and Miss Carlos Salzedo. She is a member of the Philharmonic Trio of Women Players. Miss Wendell's appearance here will come from a New York studio.

THE OPENING OF THE Union League Sunroom yesterday was the occasion for an informal luncheon party, one of the affairs which one of the women members of the club delights to give. Among the guests were Mrs. Frederick Winsor, Mrs. Frederick Pierce, Mrs. Frederick Fenno and Mrs. Ralph Adams Cram. Mrs. Cram and Mrs. Fenno were hostesses. Plans for the new clubhouse were discussed. Mrs. Gardner Dana, chairman of the clubhouse committee, has just returned from a four-day trip to New York where she studied interior decoration for the new building.

JOHN MOORS CABOT, MEMBER of the legation at Santo Domingo, is now at Prides Farm with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Lowell Cabot for a few weeks. During the summer he has been chargé d'affaires in the absence of the minister and is just now enjoying a period of rest. Mr. and Mrs. Cabot plan to return to their town house on Commonwealth avenue on October 15.

MRS. GEORGE H. MONKS, president of the Convalescent Home for the Children's Hospital in Wellesley Hills, is planning a series of broadcasts beginning December 3, to acquaint the public with the work of the home. Mrs. Monks has been active in promoting the work of the home, as are her assisting officers, Miss Mary B. Lothrop, vice-president; Mrs. Horatio Curtis and Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, honorary vice-presidents; Samuel H. Hooper, treasurer, and Mrs. Robert Amory, secretary. Mrs. Monks announced the committee [illegible] Mrs. Dorothy Lawrence and Miss Marion Kelly.

Mrs. Barklie McKee Henry (Barbara Whitney) of Boston was the guest of Mrs. H. R. Winthrop at the races held under the auspices of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club on the estate of F. Ambrose Clark at Westbury, L. I.

[illegible] tores will be Mrs. Frederick W. [illegible] baker and Mrs. William Stanwood, and for December Mrs. William Stanwood and Miss Harriet Morse.

BOSTON BASEBALL fans are wondering whether fight followers will be treated to the same types of emotional brainstorm that have characterized the above appearances of Art Shires. Were Sox first baseman, when he becomes a full-fledged pugilist, in the opinion of the portsiders, he ought to bring in the prize.

Whether he'll stay there up better than he stays on the ball field is a moot question not forthcoming, but even now, along about the third inning, the public boos him out of the lodges and sets him to pacing the ringside with a pugilistic clinch on the breeze in anticipation of any gratuitous invitation that may be filling in air at the moment.

Art has more names than any professional or amateur athlete of our association. Half a dozen or more he has given himself at various stages of his career. Most of the appellations, however, have been recorded to him by pay customers at ball parks throughout the East. A catalogue of these titles would be somewhat out of place in the columns of this sedate family journal. Suffice to say that they have seldom been either polite or complimentary.

FRESHEST GUY in baseball is the mildest of descriptions given this versatile athlete. His penchant is to climb into the ranks and wallop some innocent spectator who is enjoying himself in the harmless pastime of calling the player a blank blank of a blank blanket.

THE POET probably didn't have Shires in mind when he said, "Life is short and Art is long." It is true that Art is long. He is also broad and muscular. A hundred and ninety-three in the shade. And the guy who looks ahead to a long life would do well to not start unnecessary arguments with him.

SHIRES is the last of those perennial college athletes whose doings used to arouse the hilarity of college critics, and the ire of sport purifiers. Son of Massachusetts, he was transported early in life to Texas, where he quickly took on the general proportions of a prize longhorn steer. He was one of the Bo McMillen athletes who made football history. Adopting one new name after another, he played successively in half a dozen or more colleges of the South. He starred on teams from Centennial, Geneva, Johns Hopkins and numerous Texas colleges.

IN BASEBALL, Shires showed not about as much skill with his bare knuckles as with bat and glove. His encounters with fellow players and casual spectators were frequent and awesome. He hit the high water mark by knocking out his manager Lena Blackburne of the White Sox, on two occasions. The latest wrangle occurred in Philadelphia a couple of weeks ago.

TODAY we have news that Ted Hayes, associate of Jack Kearns, and one of the most successful trainers of fighters in the land, has taken Art under his wing in anticipation of a fighting career where he gets well into his revenue instead of fines.

WHO SAYS professional politicians are devoid of humor?

Eugene O'Neill's actors are putting across more than one clever line in Quincy these afternoons and nights during their "emotional dishes." But where is there one with the subtlety of Charlie Inness's solemn pronouncements:

"If I were mayor of Boston I wouldn't have banned The Strange Interlude."

IT ISN'T often that a man can enjoy his own cremation. There's a Boston business man who recently had that weird experience. At present he is carrying his own personal ashes about with him by way of exhibitionism.

It seems, he found it necessary some time ago to undergo an amputation, and now he walks with the aid of an artificial foot.

The amputated member was buried in the family plot in a nearby cemetery immediately after the operation. The foot continued to have severe twinges of pain. These aches became unbearable, and the sufferer sought advice. Cremation was suggested and he promptly acted.

Now the pains are gone.

TRAP FORMER RADIO DEALER IN ROBBERY

Police Say Wild Parties Ate Up Loot of Accused Brighton Man

Charged with larceny of $31,-[illegible] through forged checks and [illegible] Chas. A. Hastings, 37, married and father of two children, was arrested by police in [illegible] Jos. A. Dorey, Cpl. Magrath and Det. Blake today.

Hastings rented Hastings in his fashionable apartment on Commonwealth ave., in the Aberdeen section of Brighton, to make the arrest.

When booked and searched at headquarters Hastings, former president and treasurer of the Hastings Electrical Company of Boston, had 35 cents on his person.

He was arrested on lower court warrants, charging larceny. He was later taken in the City Prison to await arraignment in Municipal Court today.

Hastings' arrest came as a shock to friends. He was widely known in sporting circles. Police say he was a thespian of all-night parties in which chorus girls participated. Parties took place at summer resorts on Cape Cod and in camp at Milford police declare.

Inspector Dorsey, who has been working quietly on the case for several weeks, received information that Hastings was staging parties at a place on Cape Cod. When the inspector checked him up on the Cape, he found Hastings had learned police were after him and had moved his activities to a camp at Milford.

The police say that several major league baseball players were present at those parties. It is understood they thought Hastings was a man of wealth, and were not aware that he was being sought by the police.

Early this week the police went to Milford and beat a man Hastings one step ahead and he'd made a getaway. Then Inspector Dorsey received information that the man was at his home in Brighton. Early today the officers went to Brighton and entered his room.

Hastings was asleep in his bed when they entered and it was with much difficulty that he was awakened by the officers. He rubbed his eyes and said to Inspector Dorsey:

"Well, Jack, I gave you quite a chase, but you have got me."

He dressed hurriedly and accompanied the officers to the street where a machine awaited him quickly to police headquarters.

He was alone at the time of his arrest at his apartment. He told the police his wife and two children left him several weeks ago. They are in a suburb of Boston, police say.

According to Inspector Dorsey, Hastings disappeared from view in 1926. As Boston agent for the General Tire Rubber Inc. of Cleveland, O. Hastings, police say, had merchandise valued at $22,434.89, shipped to him at Boston in May, 1926, and then diverted the proceeds into his own use.

In August of that year, as Boston agent for the Mohawk Coppell Co., wholesale dealers of Cohoes, N. Y., he is said to have had merchandise shipped to him valued at $7683.77, and had diverted the proceeds to his own use.

Last month he is alleged to have gone to the Industrial Trust Co. of Massachusetts ave. and Washington st. and deposited two bonds for $1450. Police say he forged the name of Joseph L. Milhandt, treasurer of the Milhandler Electrical Supply Co. of Boston.

Hastings is also charged with giving a rubber check on the Exchange Trust Company and signed by himself for $45 to the Charles W. Sharp Company in Federal st., for groceries.

Both of these concerns have been notified to appear in court against him today.

Police say that Hastings has spent everything of the nearly $32,000 but 35 cents within two months. He denied that he had played the stock market.

Air Race Into Australian Wilds to Save Hub Doctor's Life

OLD HARVARD STAR DYING IN JUNGLE

Paul Withington Is Stricken While on Exploration Trip

An air race with death into the jungles of Australia was expected to start from Sydney, N. S. W., today in an effort to save the life of Dr. Paul Withington, explorer and former Harvard athlete, who lies critically ill far from civilization according to word received by relatives and friends of his in the Hub.

Preparations for the flight were launched in Sydney immediately following receipt of information on the condition of Dr. Withington. The plane will head for Cairns on the Queen land border, the nearest settlement to the dying man. From there it is hoped to reach Dr. Withington and carry him to some point where medical science can aid him in his fight for life.

The nature of the explorer's illness was not revealed in reports. He was accompanied on his jungle mission by Dr. Stanley Porteus of the University of Hawaii. They left Honolulu in May, planning an extensive study of the natives in the interior of Australia.

Dr. Withington's brother, Bishop Withington, of Brookline, has just returned from a visit to the explorer's son at Andover Academy, when he was informed of his brother's condition.

Dr. Withington now is considered one of the greatest all around athletes in the history of Harvard. On the football team of '06, '07 and '08 he played tackle while he rowed on the varsity crew of '07 and '08.

He was born in California, but when 14 was taken to Honolulu by his parents, receiving early education there and preparing for Harvard in Tunsbo Academy.

Andy Callahan Chalks Up 37th Straight Victory

FLOWERS IS VICTIM AT GARDEN

By JACK CONWAY

BRUCE FLOWERS' driving finish fell short of ever coming Andy Callahan's cagle lead in their 10-round bout at the Boston Garden.

As a result Callahan scored his 37th straight ring victory. The 24-year-old Lawrence thunderbolt proved he is a real ring threat.

The decision was unpopular with part of the crowd which was carried away by Flowers' rally in the ninth and tenth rounds. In these sessions the New Rochelle ngger cast caution to the winds and made Callahan give ground under his whirlwind attack.

Callahan did his best work in the early part of the scrap. This writer gave him the first, second, third, fourth, seventh and eighth rounds. The fifth frame was even, while Flowers was out front in the sixth, ninth and tenth chapters.

If Flowers had fought as well in the early part of the contest as he did in the last two frames, he would have won. But he failed to do so. This was due to the fact that the wonderful Callahan was too strong for him in the early part of the scrap. And piled in close quarters where he rocked Flower under a wild volley of blows.

Jack Conway

CALLAHAN'S victory made a decided hit with the 3000 Lawrence fans who attended the show. They gave Andy an ovation as he entered the ring, while they also cheered him wildly when he left the ring the victor.

The gross gate was $17,535 with 11,000 persons in attendance.

The bout lacked the spectacular, as most of the battling was at close quarters. Callahan got inside of Flowers' long reach and banged away with solid left and right hand blows to the head and body.

When Andy was fresh, Flowers couldn't keep out of range. During the latter part of the contest when Callahan began to tire, Flowers was able to keep out of reach of the Lawrence Thunderbolt and score with some heavy smashes to the head.

But even when tired Callahan kept going forward. His judgment of distance was at times a little bit off, but he was willing to take chances at all times in an effort to score with a knockout.

IT was "Jack Sharkey Night" at the Garden and the Boston contender received a wild welcome from the fans. It must have made Sharkey's heart feel good when the big gathering cheered him as he took his seat at the ringside.

Just before the main bout started the crowd demanded Sharkey. It was necessary for Jack to stand up and make several bows. As Sharkey walked around the ring to greet Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley, he was tendered an ovation.

Sharkey could not be introduced from the ring on account of a rule of the Boxing Commission which bars all but principals in the main bout at the following show of a club from being introduced.

Sharkey was accompanied by Mrs. Sharkey and a party of friends.

ARTHUR FLYNN of Lawrence fresh from a three weeks training siege at Orangeburg with Jack Sharkey, scored a popular six round knockout over Joe Zalinsky of Binghamton, N. Y. It was a punching battle from the start. First Flynn and then Zalinsky forged into the lead.

When it looked as though the New York Stater was going to keep on leading Flynn nailed him on the chin with a savage right hand clout. Zelinsky took the count of nine. When he got up, Flynn cracked him on the chin with another right hand sock. The blow hung Zalinsky on the ropes, and the referee came to his rescue.

CHARLEY PARKER of the South End won over Pancho Villa in an eight-round bout that was jammed with thrills. Both boys socked away from bell to bell. There was more steam behind Parker's belts and he had his rival in distress several times.

Louis Nemis of Halifax won from Tony Magna of the North End in a four-rounder.

Tommy Rawson of East Boston grabbed the decision from Martin Owens of New Bedford in four frames.

Henry Janco won in a round from Frankie Burns, a Lawrence rival.

Joe Diaz of Cuba bested Ruby Levine of the South End in six beats.

Head Coach Fred Brice and his University of Maine squad which meets Boston College at Fenway Park on Saturday, will arrive here tomorrow morning. The light and dark blue squad is coming from Hancock by boat. Unless the ocean quiets down, they will still be staggering from "sea legs" when they meet the Maroon.

Yale has been trying to sell a number of radical id as this season but they have been unable to get them across. However they did manage to get West Point to agree to a non-scouting compact. There is a "Nubian in the kindling" at Yale who is going to cause no end of trouble unless he is ousted in the immediate future.

Although the football season is only just underway, the new fumble rule has already received more unfavorable comment than any of the recently-adopted changes. Oddly enough, the coaches will protest strenuously during the season but they will not get up in the meeting this winter and voice their opinions.

The elbow injury received by Foster Davis, the Concord, N. H. boy, gave Hal Levin a former Latin School line man, his chance to step up to the Harvard varsity. As Davis will be out of th game for at least 10 days, Levin has a fine opportunity to register with Duke Dunne, when will make the going difficult for the New Hampshire lad.

Coach Jack Cannell is using rare judgment in his substitutions at Dartmouth. He is working his linesmen in pairs and has back fields as units. Cannells objective is to develop two teams of as near equal strength as possible and, unless blocked by injuries he should succeed.

In Jack Grossman Rutgers has a fine passer. Grossman was mainly responsible for the Scarlet victory over Princeton in a practice game this week. Despite the rain the big Rutgers' fullback tossed passes unerringly.

Jack Halloran, the former Dartmouth tackle, is back in football life is a student at Medill, finishing a course in medicine which he started at Dartmouth, and is playing middle wing on the varsity. Halloran admits that he is still somewhat confused as to the rules governing the Canadian game, especially those prohibiting cleaning out.

Myles Lane, the former Dartmouth star, has a young brother playing with Melrose High, who is a most promising football player.

Series May Disprove Value of Signals

By JOE CASHMAN

THE coming World Series promises to prove, among other things [illegible]

With the possible exception of John McGraw of the Giants, no manager in the majors employs as many signals during a game as Connie Mack, veteran pilot of the Athletics.

He may not call every pitch as does McGraw, but he shifts all his players on each new enemy batter steps to the plate by waving them with a score card. He also signals his own men right to do when up at the bat.

If you didn't know the versatile Cornelius and what he was doing you would think he was watching him direct a contest that he was suffering from the palsy.

[illegible] hard on the ball. Fix your attention on a [illegible] the ball, the spot where the ball is and the ground meet in a good one—and design to make the clubhead whip into that spot. Only thru practice swinging can you accustom yourself to the speed of action that takes place there when the club-head goes through the ball, but you must accustom yourself to that speed and learn not to fall back from the ball or forward into it as the club goes through. Remember to keep your head still and at the same time, in the bottom arc of your swing let your arms and hands swing free. Do not force the action, and at the same time do not restrain it in holding back. Just as the club-head goes into the ball never let let your body swing through with it, yet keep your head still. It is surprising how much your body can move while your head remains fixed, and you must learn that the body is not held fixed and still even though the head is. The body has work to do and must move. The head does not act at all. Also the head is your swing center, around which your action revolves, so it therefore keeps still clear to the finish.

2 STAR BOUTS AT ARENA

Great Expert Array to Cover World Series Games

READERS of the Boston Evening American have a treat coming in the shape of the best coverage of the World Series that it is possible for a newspaper to give its readers.

Picturesque descriptive series stories; vivid, yet accurate play by play accounts, and full statistical tables are to be furnished the readers of the Boston Evening American immediately after each game is over.

HORNSBY

NICK FLATLEY, editor of sports for the American, is one of the most capable baseball experts in the country. He has attended World Series for many years, and consequently has a rich background of experience on which to base his stories of the games. He will write a sparkling description and play by play account of each of the series battles.

DAMON RUNYON, brilliant columnist of the New York American, is ready to click off his impressions of the series games.

WARREN BROWN, noted Chicago sport writer, will give the readers a fine story of each game from the Western angle.

No World Series would be complete for the fans if they had no chance to read stories written by participants in the conflicts. The Boston Evening American has contracted for the exclusive services of star ath letes, important members of the respective lineups.

ROGERS HORNSBY, second baseman of the Cubs, and one of the greatest sluggers in the history of the game, is to write his story of the series.

CHARLIE ROOT, mound hope of the Chicago team, who probably will start on the hill for the Windy City club in the first game, also is to send his version.

JIMMY FOXX, youthful star first baseman of the Athletics and one of the hitters who must be stopped by the Cubs if they are to win, will contribute a daily feature.

Other signed articles complete the lineup of stories which are to give the readers of the Boston Evening American a clear picture of the games.

Don't wait an extra day to read of any one of the contests. Buy the Boston Evening American and get the whole story as soon as the games are completed.

This Day in Our History

ON October 3, 1918, the United States troops completed their drive against the Germans in Argonne Forest. During this drive they captured 120 guns, 2750 trench mortars, 300 machine guns, and thousands of shells. The attack broke the backbone of Germany's strongest line of defence.

Janet Has Orders for Ann

CHAPTER 10

EARLY Monday afternoon Ann Marie came in from lunch to find Janet Goodwin sitting on one corner of her desk, calmly smoking a cigarette.

On her lap was a large flat brown-paper package.

"Look here!" she said in her quick, breathless way. "I got a lot of orders for you Saturday—even if you didn't come to my luncheon. Three of the girls want you to do some work for them—four dresses each. And here's the material I bought it this morning, myself, to save you some time and trouble. Don't you think I'm nice and thoughtful?" She laughed.

"You are!" And Ann Marie meant it with all her heart. "I've never known anyone as kind as you—and Jim—are. You've been too good to me—"

"Look here!" Janet said again, interrupting her. "Here are the names and addresses of the girls who want the dresses. When they're finished send them, will you?" And send the bills along with them. I'd take care of it for you but I'm going out of town in the morning. Going up to Maine to a wedding!

Ann Marie tapped the package with her forefinger.

"I'll get started on this stuff tonight," she said. "I do it here at the office after everyone's gone home. Miss Hogan doesn't mind . . . Janet, I don't know how to thank you for doing this for me. Truly I don't."

"If you ever thank me I'll never speak to you again!" Janet declared vigorously. "Goodbye, Ann Marie. As soon as I get back I want you to meet those girls. You'll like them, and you ought to have some fun once in a while. You work too hard . . . I'm going to make you play!"

She darted away in her yellow flannel dress, bright as a ray of sunshine in the gloom of the big work room.

At 6 o'clock the place was empty. Empty and so quiet that the tick-tock of the clock on the wall above Ann Marie's head seemed very loud.

Outside in the corridors of the great building feet went hurrying by . . . The sound of them died away in the distance . . . The elevator doors clanged. Then there was silence for a long time . . . Outside the windows twilight deepened into darkness.

Every now and then Ann Marie would lift her golden-brown head from her work-table and look around the office. It seemed vast in the shadow- and rather terrifying. A great office building after hours can be a very, very lonesome sort of place.

The piece of organdy she was working on was pale blue, and after Ann Marie had made tiny dots all over it with a pencil she began to paint blue wood-violets on it—a violet for every dot. It was hard work, and she was tired after the long day.

Her back ached and her eyes ached, too. She sat up, stretched her neck and closed her eyes for a moment to rest them.

When she opened them she saw that someone had come into the room and was standing just inside the door where the shadows were thick and dark.

She stood up, clapping a hand to her mouth to keep from screaming.

"Who's there?" What do you want?" she managed to blurt out. And then she was blinded with the glare from her own desk-light. She could hear her voice shake as she spoke.

"It's just Jim Goodwin, Ann Marie. I should have knocked on the door. I'm sorry I frightened you," and he came walking into the pool of light that lay on the floor around the table.

"You shouldn't be here alone at night," he said. "Janet told me tonight that you were working here late, and I couldn't stop thinking about it.

The light struck upward at his face as he stood there. And in it was the look that Ann Marie had watched for so many times in Neal's face—and never had seen there. The look of tenderness and longing that a man has for the woman he loves.

"How faithful he would be to a woman he cared for," she found herself thinking. "How good he would be—"

And under that thought ran another one. "I mustn't let him stay here. I must get rid of him . . . Neal's so jealous of him."

"How are you going to get home?" he asked her. "It's raining outside."

Ann Marie laughed. "I'm going to get home the way all the rest of the working-girls in Manhattan get home," she said in a matter-of-fact way. "I'm going to walk part of the way and ride part of the way. And rain doesn't bother me . . . I love it, and some day I'm going to paint a really good picture called 'Rain on the Roof—'"

"I know. You told me about it." He nodded. "But you aren't going to do it painting violets on other women's dresses and drawing fashion-plates all day for Miss Hogan. I've been thinking about it lately—You ought to have a good teacher right away. You need some money—right now. Let's be business-like for a minute—"

He pulled up a chair and sat down beside her, full of his plan.

And Ann Marie knew instantly what the plan was going to be. He was going to offer her some money.

"You're going to tell me that you'll lend me some money!" she cried out. "But please don't do it!—You're the last person in the world I'd borrow money from!"

"Why."

"Because you've done so much for me now!" she answered. "You got me this position with Miss Hogan. And Janet's gone to all of her friends and asked them to give me work. No, I mustn't get into any more kindness from you. I've taken too much already."

He just looked at her.

"You'll have to go now if you don't mind me saying so," she went on. "You know I'm engaged to marry Neal—and he—Well, he wouldn't like it if I'm knew you and I were here alone—You know he wouldn't!"

"I suppose he wouldn't," Jim admitted in his plain quiet way. "But so long as I'm here won't you let me wait and take you home when you're ready to go? It's raining and it's late—"

Ann Marie shook her head vigorously.

"Neal might come for me," she cried out. "Yes, I know I've bought a little car, and I can't drive it. But he can, and if he should come for me and find you here—"

She stopped, startled by the sudden loud ringing of the telephone on the wall just behind her.

She turned in her chair and looked at the small black instrument. It kept on ringing.

"Goodness! How that did startle me," she said, looking at Jim, wide-eyed. "If I'd been here alone I'd have been frightened to death . . . Do you suppose we ought to answer it? Maybe it's Alice for me.

Jim picked up the receiver.

"Hello," he said into the mouthpiece. "Hello—"

An odd look came into his face after a moment.

"Who is this? You, Neal?—Yes, this is Jim Goodwin," he thought it was you. What's wrong?"

Ann Marie sprang to her feet.

"Let me talk to him!" she cried.

But Jim put out his hand and gently, very gently, pushed her back from the telephone.

"Where are you now, Neal?" he was asking now. "Where? All right, old man, we'll be there as soon as we can get there."

He was laughing when he turned away from the telephone.

"Neal and your sister," he said, "have been held up in Connecticut—"

"Connecticut?" asked Ann Marie in blank amazement. "Why, what were they doing way up in Connecticut?"

Jim laughed again. "Well, they were parked at the side of the road, so Neal says," he explained. "They were on their way home from Westport, where they'd had dinner, and a road-cop came along and he and Neal got into a fight—I guess it doesn't pay to fight with policemen, before me—"

"And what happened?" asked Ann Marie, tense with excitement. "Where are they now?"

"At the police station up there," Jim said cheerfully. "The police think they've stolen the car—and you and I will have to go up there and tell the police that it's your car. Put your coats on and come along."

"— Parked at the side of the road," thought Ann Marie as Jim's car left the town behind and nosed its way into the rain-swept countryside.

She closed her eyes and pictured them, sitting in the little car at the side of the road with the rain a-pour in the darkness and the loneliness of the country all around them . . . When two people, a man and a girl, sat in a parked car along a country road it meant that they wanted to be away from everyone. It meant that they were in love with each other almost always.

"I wish I'd never seen that Hilda girl," Ann Marie thought and her voice was edged with bitterness. "I ought to have had more faith in Neal. I should have—"

"You did," Jim Goodwin answered quietly. "You do, Ann Marie, and that's a fact."

"Doesn't it lift one out of oneself? Isn't it beautiful?" Her voice was in his ear, beguiling him.

Oh, he loved Corinna — wasn't going to let himself forget her—now.

The music stopped.

Then out of the babble of voices and buzz of movement came the notes of the violin and the piano.

Corinna was going to sing.

"It's Gamberetti!"

The smiling, tuneful voice, with a tremble as of tears, choked back, drifted out to them.

The music had faded into silence. Malvey—who adored music and was now emotionally keyed up—stared into space. Before him, like a lovely vision, was Denise's face.

She whispered: "Isn't it beautiful?"

He answered huskily: "You—you too—you're beautiful, Denise!"

A Kiss for Corinna

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XI

"THAT was a slap. On her roman-tic mood exactly like a bucket of cold water.

She gave a raucous little laugh, and rose from the bench, in the dim light staring at him. She was not quite sober, even though this was only the commencement of the evening.

"Ho! Ha! And I thought you were unattached. What's the name of this charmer?"

He got up too. He said, with boyish patience: "She's the sweetest girl in the world, and her name is Corinna."

"And you're in love with her? But of course." She laughed unsteadily. "You must bring her to see me. She's lucky!"

There was one comfort in it anyhow, thought she. It would be a set-back for Denise to know about this girl Corinna!

Amusing how Denise had made her invite the young man here so that she could start an affair with him!

She said: "It's wonderful to meet anybody in love. I've often thought I was, but the love never lasted."

From behind, there came a high shrill laugh. Radiantly pretty Denise Van Wyck stood in the light.

"Mooning away," she exclaimed as she advanced swiftly toward them. "Poor Natalie's so romantic. With her, love is like measles—all the worse when it comes late in life! And she does get it so badly."

Denise Van Wyck was looking very lovely in a green sheath frock. It had all the vernal freshness of a tulip. With the lights of the studio streaming out behind her, she made a lovely picture.

The Countess de Santalvos was annoyed over the interruption of her tete-a-tete with the good-looking stranger. And considerably more annoyed by Denise's pertness.

What had the girl said? That love was like the measles, all the worse when you got it late in life."

That shaft had been pointed for the young man's benefit. Denise wanted to make out that the Countess was no chicken . . .

But not one moment was allowed Natalie in which to give a suitably stinging answer.

Denise addressed herself directly to Malvey. "Something's gone wrong with my car. I wish you'd come out and have a look at it!" She swept him off, with a gay effrontery.

He soon fixed her car for her, and drove it to the nearest garage with Denise beside him. As they walked back to the studio, interested glances were flung at them.

He wished Corinna had a frock like that worn by Denise—all rippling, graceful lines, and yet so simple.

It never dawned on him that this garment—issuing from a fashionable house on 57th st., near the avenue—had cost over $150.

Denise wore a sheaf of lilies-of-the-valley on one shoulder. Fragrant it was, and virginal.

The guests began arriving. Some of them freakish. But, on the whole, gay, cheerful, friendly people.

He had been embarrassed when alone with the Countess de Santalvos. But now that awkwardness was beginning to wear off.

Pretty women gave him interested or provocative glances. Some of them didn't wait to be formally introduced, but came up and chatted airily with him. Of fashionable doings. Of the 'little season.' Of the latest show, and all that sort of thing.

Drinks were immediately put in circulation. A second Jap appeared, to assist the slant-eyed Yogo. A three-piece orchestra arrived, and shortly thereafter there was dancing. More and more people kept arriving. Soon the big studio was fairly crowded.

Denise deliberately left Malvey rather alone, to begin with. She wasn't going to make the same mistake as Natalie had done. Natalie had cooed and gurgled at him in the most idiotic manner. He must be given time, before she took the field, to forget Natalie's folly.

Her tactics would be different. Women made such a fool over the young fellow that he must be sick of the word love and all pertaining thereunto.

She avoided Malvey for the first three dances.

The heroines claimed him twice. Denise thought Natalie looked like a clumsy red moth in her foolish draperies.

After his last sight of her in the bizarre Cleopatra costume, she was glad that tonight she had chosen something girlish and simple.

Natalie was pressing drinks upon him. She always did do that when she wanted to make a new captive.

Across the studio, Denise saw Malvey.

"Why are you avoiding me?"

The drinks had gone to his head a little, and in his eyes was a challenging look. Although he was half laughing.

Her look matched his. "Why should I pay attention to such a universal charmer?"

"Don't call me that. I'm no lounge lizard. I tell you I'm the most humdrum and hard-working fellow—"

"You're just what I like, anyhow," said Denise boldly. She gave him a long upward glance, and put her arm on his shoulder. As they melted off together in the dance, swaying and circling in perfect rhythm, he remarked, "Good tune, isn't it?"

"Hark to the words of it—"

"I'm racing to glory—"

she chanted meaningly.

He heard her, as she had intended that he should—but he said nothing.

She raised that beguiling face of hers to his, whispering provocatively: "You wouldn't do a thing like that? Would never lose your head—not seriously—over any body?"

The lilies of the valley on her shoulder gave out a heady sweetness. That—and the wine had drunk—mounted, so that he suddenly felt dizzy. He said brusquely, "Come on into the garden for a breath of air, won't you?"

Her spell was working. Denise was thrilled to the marrow.

Out in the little patio there was no sound except the music from the studio and the lyrical splashing of the little fountain.

Denise, her fingers on his arm whispered: "Look up—look at the stars, Malvey—"

Love, a Thrilling Short Story -:- By N. Florence Leech

"YOU are taking a chance, when you marry Ralph," Mrs. Ames said frankly to the slight, blue-eyed girl who sat beside her on the couch. "Our family had always been used to money until the crash a few years ago. Ralph means well, but he is thoughtless and extravagant."

"I love him enough to take the chance," Anna answered, looking full into his mother's eyes. "I want a home, and I'm willing to do more than my share to obtain it."

As the honeymoon drew to a close, Anna found that into her happiness was creeping a tiny but persistent fear. She approved of Ralph's engaging the drawing room on the train, but in Montreal he insisted on occupying the bridal suite in the hotel. And his tips to servants and porters, his gifts to her, were lavish.

"I won't mention money now," she decided. "But after we get home, Ralph and I must work out a budget and keep within its limits."

The Ames fortune was greatly reduced but there had been enough left to Ralph's share of his father's estate to build an attractive bungalow for the young couple. Ralph was head of a branch insurance agency and earned a good salary. Anna's problem would be to see that they lived within his income. Their first extravagance was the installation of a frigidaire. "It will soon pay for itself," Ralph argued. "We are fond of our frozen desserts and salads." To this Anna reluctantly agreed.

As weeks lengthened into months, Anna, who had formerly been secretary in a bank, became used to the routine of housekeeping, but not used to the joy of having a devoted husband and a home. She would have been perfectly happy had it not been for Ralph's careless extravagance. Every Saturday night she and Ralph checked off their expenses against their budget. Anna kept within her household and dress allowance, but Ralph's expenditures were always a little over.

"Why," she asked with asperity, "did you buy those ties when you have dozens?"

"I like to look well for you," he answered, tactfully. But she was not to be diverted.

"Since you wanted five dollars, I shall have to save it. I'll have my shoes resoled instead of buying new ones, as I had intended."

Ralph looked the guilt he felt, and for two weeks kept faithfully within the budget.

Anna's birthday was in September. "What would you like to have for a gift?" Ralph inquired in her. "I believe that this year you better give me something for the house," she answered, thinking of the salad plates she needed, and the console mirror she wanted for the hall. "And Ralph, dear, please be economical."

"I'll bring you a window screen," he chuckled, "or perhaps a scatter rug."

But when the gift arrived, it proved to be a long, heavy imposing roll, and Anna's heart sank.

Ralph had come home early, and helped the delivery man unwrap the package. A rug—a large rug! Ralph was head of a branch insurance agency and earned a good salary. Anna's problem would be to see that they lived within his income. Their first extravagance was the installation of a frigidaire. "It will soon pay for itself," Ralph argued. "We are fond of our frozen desserts and salads." To this Anna reluctantly agreed.

As weeks lengthened into months, Anna, who had formerly been secretary in a bank, became used to the routine of housekeeping, but not used to the joy of having a devoted husband and a home. She would have been perfectly happy had it not been for Ralph's careless extravagance. Every Saturday night she and Ralph checked off their expenses against their budget. Anna kept within her household and dress allowance, but Ralph's

"Nothing shoddy could express my love for you," he declared.

"And I took the money out of the bank."

Anna lay awake for hours that night, thinking, thinking. The rug was an expression of love, and she could not hurt Ralph. He honestly tried, she believed, to be economical. But they were not saving the monthly sum they had planned. They were barely keeping within their income. And unforeseen emergencies arose in every family sooner or later. She must make Ralph realize the necessity of retrenching—but how?

Golden autumn days became crisp and invigorating, and an early winter was upon the land. The spirit of Christmas was in the air.

"Let's have a simple Christmas, Ralph," Anna suggested. "A small tree that we'll trim ourselves, and gifts that are a labor of love. I'll knit you a golf sweater if you'll make me a bookcase for the bedroom."

He agreed enthusiastically, and Anna felt that a crisis was passed successfully. But she reckoned without her husband. Ten days before Christmas he telephoned home, his voice ringing with excitement. "I'm sending out a little gift that will brighten the winter for us," he exclaimed. "I know you'll love it."

With apprehension Anna awaited the arrival of she knew not what; and when it came, the huge wrapped object looked to her startled eyes as big as an office safe.

"An electric victrola," the man informed her, "and a case of records."

"Wait!" Anna held up her hand. "Don't bring it in until I have time to think."

And as she stood there, her hand over her eyes, she saw all the future stretching before her. The bank balance dwindling, their income expenses keeping pace with the increases in Ralph's salary. No security, ever the fear of the unexpected. Determinedly Anna faced the man, "take it back," she said. "I refuse to receive it."

Ralph's incredulous surprise when he discovered what Anna had done flamed into hot anger. They quarrelled for the first time, and when they retired for the night they were still unreconciled.

"He'll see it as I do," Anna kept reassuring herself, but her husband left home next morning with a curt goodbye and no farewell kiss. All day she listened for the ringing of the phone. Surely he never forgave her? But she was in the right—she knew she was in the right.

At four o'clock Anna lay on the couch crying. Suddenly arms were about her, a rough cheek pressed against hers.

"Ralph," she cried, joyously.

"Anna—you're right—listen!" And Ralph blurted out the commonplace tragedy of the morning.

"Anna, when I think of the possibility of your being left penniless because of my wastefulness—" he choked, and was silent.

Anna's arms were close about her husband's neck. "I'm not afraid any longer," she whispered. "You love me, and with your love you are at last making common sense!"

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soothing syrup has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play, can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine: it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

AT THE DIAL

By BERT BROCKBANK
Radio Editor

SERGT. ALVIN C. YORK, outstanding hero of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War, is expected to make his radio-wide audience debut this afternoon during the Army and Navy Band program broadcast from the War College in Washington at 3 P. M. Although he is to make a speech, through an interpreter, on the use of machine guns in the war, it is thought that many persons will tune in to hear the famous marksman who is credited with killing 25 Germans single-handed in the Argonne forest.

According to information we have received today, Sergt. Harry M. Parsons was York's immediate superior in the Argonne, and he will tell the radio audience of the action in which York, single-handed killed 25 men and captured 35 prisoners and a score of machine guns. Sergt. Parsons is a resident of Brooklyn N. Y. Another who will appear before the microphone and sing the praises of Sergt. York is Floyd Gibbons, noted war correspondent. With characteristic modesty York will not mention his own acts of heroism but will tell of his educational work among the mountain children of Tennessee. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the United States Army, will briefly discuss present army activities.

THE combined entertaining facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System will be used tomorrow night to broadcast the world series baseball game. The broadcast will be in connection with the annual meeting in this country of Pioneer Boosters, men prominent in connection with commercial aviation. Col. Lindbergh, honorary president of the organization, will come through with a speech and WEEI, key station of the broadcasting system, will open the reception at 8 o'clock. Arrangements are also under way for the broadcasting of Premier Mussolini's address in Washington will be heard in Boston. Photographers will be present at the Pioneer Booster meeting in Washington and WEEI engineers will be on hand to broadcast the speeches. Arrangements are also under way for the broadcasting of the annual banquet of the Pioneer Boosters in this city.

Tonight we are to have another of those interesting programs which Phillips Carlin, director of the National Broadcasting Co. will present over the combined networks of the Columbia Broadcasting System. This will be the first of a series of winter broadcasts to be given through WJZ. They will be supported by popular and semi-classical musical selection played by the Champion Sparkers orchestra.

ROMANCE, love, laughter and a dash of mystery will be the ingredients of the thirty-minute dramatic sketch which will be broadcast from station WJZ at 8 o'clock tonight. The sketch, which is entitled "Romance of Radio," will be the first of a series of dramatic sketches which will be broadcast from WJZ every Thursday night at 8 o'clock. The sketches will be written around the problems of radio broadcasting and will be presented by members of the staff of the National Broadcasting Co. The cast for tonight's sketch will include Graham McNamee, Milton J. Cross, Alois Havrilla, Phillips Carlin, Ben Pollack and his orchestra, Gertrude Berg, Ted Husing, Norman Brokenshire, Tom Slater, Jack Fulton, Lucille Manners, Ben Alley, Jack Arthur, Ireene Wicker, Tom Howard, George Shackley, Jack Miller and Jack Shilkret and his orchestra.

STONE FLOORS ON BRIDGES

Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 3—New bridges being constructed on the transcanada highway as it passes along the St. John river valley, through New Brunswick, will have concrete floors, which will place the new structure in the most modern class of structure for handling the rapidly growing motor traffic on this scenic route.

Tenders have just been called by D. A. Stewart, minister of public works, for the concrete floor systems for the Garden Creek bridge, on the Long's Creek bridge, both of Fredericton in York County, where steel superstructures are to be placed on concrete and granite substructures.

These new structures replace old wooden bridges which were washed away by heavy ice runs in spring floods on the St. John river. Temporary bridges in use on the sites have been in use, but the modern new bridges will be on new locations, which make for straighter lines of current, and improvement of the roadway alignment.

Tenders for these new concrete floor systems close on October 4.

TRAFFIC CODE HEARING

The Boston traffic commission announces that it will hold a hearing Thursday, October 10, in its hearing room at police headquarters, at which the public is invited to offer arguments for and against proposals for important and permanent changes in the traffic code.

The proposals call for the elimination of parking along Harvard ave., between Commonwealth ave. and Brighton ave., and the exclusion of heavy trucks on Dexter pl., Randindale, and Church st., West Roxbury.

Merchants along Harvard ave. are expected to oppose the anti-parking ban.

State Opens Course in Sight Teaching

Joseph A. Hennessey of Boston Teachers' College will conduct course in Visual Aids in Teaching for teachers of Boston and vicinity. This course is offered by the Division of University Extension of the Massachusetts Department of Education. The first meeting will be held at the Massachusetts Art School, Exeter and Newbury sts., on Tuesday, at 6 p. m.

Hennessey will show teachers from public schools and private groups how to apply moving pictures, lantern slides, diagrams and graphs to teaching. It is understood that many not directly engaged in public school work will be added to the large group of teachers who have already registered for this course.

Medbury Says—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

NEVADA and Colorado may be all right, but New York is the chorus girls' goldfield.

PITIFUL CASES

The wire-haired fox terrier who stepped on a battery and short-circuited himself.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

ODE TO A NECKER

Don't give up the ship.

MOMENTOUS MOMENTS

When an old time warrior discovered a flea in his knight clothing.

TODAY'S TIGHT-WAD

The freshman who has his suit made to his own measure.

WONDERS OF NATURE

There's no doubt about regeneration in animals. Whenever a rabbit dies, he comes back a few days later as mink.

ACE OF CADS

The fellow who had gray hairs put in his toupee on that people would think he worried.

OUR OWN VAUDEVILLE

Patient—I don't know what's the matter with me. I'm always seeing spots before my eyes.

Doctor—Well, find me a leopard and I'll begin the examination.

PENNSYLVANIA ON TRIAL TRIP

Logging 152 miles over a course that will carry her as far south as False Cape Buoy, off the Virginia coast, the new turbo-electric liner Pennsylvania of the Panama-Pacific Line, largest steamship ever built in America, will undergo an exacting sea trial today, lasting 12 hours.

She leaves the yards of her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, and after entering the Virginia Capes will proceed to the ocean for a series of maneuvers that will be closely observed by marine experts of the builders and the International Mercantile Marine Company.

After calibration of the radio compass and adjustment of the magnetic compasses, the Pennsylvania will proceed from Cape Henry to False Cape Buoy, a run of 90 miles, going only the port generator.

She will then be driven over the same course 142 miles on a trial sailing for full power from both generators, and will be followed immediately by hopping tests and by all ships' boats.

The Pennsylvania's maximum speed will be made for high speed on the return of the sea trial in the afternoon, when she will be driven by both generators. She is to be delivered to the Pennsylvania's full horsepower.

$28,189 Tax Rebate to Fall River Mill

Fall River, Oct. 3—Rebates of $28,489.92 for 1927 and $2,997.17 for 1928 in the tax abatement cases of the Parker Mills against the city were announced just as the hearing of the case was about to open with Dist.-Atty. Charles B. Rugg of Worcester as commissioner under appointment from Judge David Pollen of the Superior Court.

Agreement of judgment in favor of the mills of a total of $32,495.09 was entered, saving the city a long day trial.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

What Will Back Bay Be in 25 Years?

Editor Boston American:

What will the Back Bay section be in 25 years? Will it be the same as it is today?

You will see 150-foot-high apartments and hotels spanning Commonwealth ave., with business shops and stores lining that avenue.

Central Congregational Church, Mt. Vernon Congregational Church, Emmanuel Church in Newbury st., or Trinity Church will likely be razed and apartments erected on their spots.

Trinity Church will probably be the future cathedral church, and St. Paul's Cathedral will be turned into a large institutional building for the different associations and societies of the Episcopal church with offices to rent and large auditoriums.

The Back Bay will change. It is changing. Old families are dying out; the young are moving out to other parts of the city.

The flying machine and new types of auto will bring about radical changes PROPHET.

Boston.

Barmaid's Sermon Was Most Practical

Editor Boston American:

Would Boston tolerate a barmaid preaching in a Unitarian church of this city? I trow not. But Miss Varney Cashmere, barmaid at the Marlborough Arms Public House, preached this last summer in the Banbury Chapel, England.

It was a good practical talk, as 2 can vouch for. She took the place of the pastor, the Rev. Grace Mewhort, who was absent upon her vacation.

Could there be greater liberality then this? A barmaid preaching in a church!

Cambridge. H. Y. L.

Liberal Faith Once Saved McDonald

Editor Boston American:

Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain is not a Presbyterian, but a lay Unitarian preacher. He is a good talker and has a very practical way of putting matters that appeals to the average listener. During his first term as prime minister he was almost flayed by the combined veins of the Liberals and Conservatives, but he tried to break up his hold on his position, because of his relations with Russia. But his liberal faith saved him as it has upon other occasions, when prudence and patience got him into activity.

George H. Houghton.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The Way Out

A Message to the Ambitious

WOULD you like to get ahead in the world? Do you want a better position, more pay?

Why not DO something about it?

"Oh," the young man says, "I am not fitted for anything better, not prepared for it. You have to have an education. I quit in the sixth grade. I see my mistake, now, but it's too late."

It is NOT too late, and in order that the responsibility may be yours, and not ours, we call the attention of young and adult to the fact that the evening schools have reopened for registration and will begin their sessions next Monday.

This great city of ours very generously places at the disposal of citizens—young and older—an evening high school, eight evening commercial high schools, a mechanic arts evening high school, evening classes in the Boston Trade School—to help men who are already "in" a skilled trade—and sixteen evening elementary schools.

You will be encouraged by two paragraphs from a recent report of the Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Burke:

"The evening elementary schools provide for three distinct types of work, namely, courses of instruction similar to those offered in the day elementary schools and leading directly to graduation as a condition for admission to evening high schools; a course in Americanization and Citizenship providing opportunity for instruction in English and naturalization, mainly for foreign-born minors and adults; and a course in several branches of home practical arts, including cookery, dressmaking, home decoration, home nursing, and millinery. In one evening elementary school classes are organized in lip-reading for pupils wholly or partially deaf.

"There has been a distinct change in the pupil body of our evening schools. The students are a purposive, serious-minded group, self-disciplined and desirous of reaching a predetermined goal. Those preparing for entrance to college, those studying to become nurses, doctors, lawyers, teachers, etc., as well as others whose aim is to increase their efficiency in their present positions, are found among the student body. Indeed, almost all are SEEKING DEFINITE EDUCATION FOR SERVICE IN A COMMUNITY THAT IS DEMANDING HIGHER QUALIFICATIONS FOR APPOINTMENT TO BETTER POSITIONS."

Sessions are held on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

Not only instruction but books and stationery are FREE TO RESIDENTS OF BOSTON. Non-residents may attend by paying a small fee.

And DON'T be afraid of being lonesome or conspicuous. The evening high schools will have more than 6000, the evening elementary schools more than 7000 pupils. There are more than 400 teachers.

WAITING for you!

Gentlemen's Agreement

To Keep the Price of Scallops "Where It Ought to Be"

The season being upon us, the fishermen of Cape Cod and Buzzards Bay are wondering if there may not be some way by which to regulate the scallop market. Last year, so many motorboats and dredges were out, and so many men at work, that in the first week of the season the price dropped from $4 to $2 per gallon.

At a dinner of the Selectmen's Association of Barnstable County, a night or two ago, Dennis, Yarmouth and Barnstable suggested a daily limit of 10 bushels per man. Chatham, reporting a "good set," held out for 20. They compromised on 10 bushels per man, 15 bushels per boat, and called upon Marion, Wareham and Mattapoisett to fall in line.

The housewife in the city, who at the beginning of the season will pay $1.50 per quart or more, may not be deeply interested, but on the Cape men who until January will be going out in icy waters at dawn are questioning the legality of such a restriction, at least in so far as it applies to the "boat." They think it may be all right to limit the daily take per man.

In the season, the scallop fisherman sometimes realizes as much as $100 for a week's labor. He earns every penny of it. In recent years not so much is heard about a trick of the trade known as "soaking." Scallop absorb great quantities of water and there was a time—the city price being $1.50 a quart—when your purchase might include 30 to 40 per cent of water.

While waiting for the scallop to come to market it may not be amiss to call attention to last week's huge catches of mackerel. On a single day more than 150,000 pounds were brought into Provincetown, caught off Little Bank. Buyers offered 1½, 2 and 2½ cents for them! This is a good time to buy fresh mackerel.

New England Worked Together to Bring Next Year's Legion Convention to Us

The vote at Louisville shows what teamwork can do.

This will be the first National Convention of the American Legion to be held in New England.

It would be difficult to name ALL to whom credit is due, but the names occur of Past Commander John W. Reth, former Governor Fuller, Mayor Nichols, Governor Allen and Dennis Haverty, secretary of the Legion in Massachusetts. The Chamber of Commerce helped.

But DON'T forget that Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut were with us.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—One of America's toughest lexicographers endorses the use of on-plane and deplane.

A lexicographer is a compiler of a dictionary and is often seen waiting in wait for his prey in the thought-proof rooms of Carnegie library.

Enplane and deplane mean to get in and get out of an aeroplane. We use the word entrain when we take a train ride and we say embark when we take a boat.

You could also say debike when you fall off a bicycle.

Science and progress are responsible for many mechanical words which we are forced to learn every day.

Thirty years ago we didn't know what a garage meant.

Now, we don't know what parking space means.

There have been so many industries organized recently that we require a brand new set of technical words to describe the result.

Our better class of linguists heartily endorses the word nonstop when getting tossed out of a speakeasy.

The proper word for entering the hootchette can be pronounced many different ways. The man opens the door and you scramm in.

So when you are tossed out, we might say that you have been descrammed, even unto the third generation.

After you bounce three or four times, and have decided to leave the rest of the flying to Lindbergh, a cop approaches on foot and says, "Have you been deplaned?"

You remark, "Nope, judging from the timbers taste, I think I have been denatured."

It's little words like this that make the mighty ocean and the pleasant convalescence.

Some of our more inexperienced porch drinkers and historians think that Hippocrates was so named because he carried a crate of the stuff on his hip. We are also indebted to Marconi for many new words.

When radio started we learned about the cat's whiskers and resistance coils and things. Now, when a mezzanine-soprano is sobbing her bridgework away over the Purple network, we can say that she is enwowling and otherwise degnawking.

English is a language of cracked lips, anyway, and we hope they make it tougher just to teach a lesson to masters of ceremonies.

We will now go for a little blimp and enzeppel ourselves.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I DO believe that the most insidious danger in modern life is THE PUSH BUTTON.

Push a button, turn a lever—there is light, heat, water, transportation . . . you may talk to the world . . . listen to the chatter of the world without moving from your seat . . . summon the markets of the world to your door.

This ease, this freedom from responsibility, we call PROGRESS. But is it? It makes life infinitely more comfortable for the consumer, infinitely more profitable for the producer, BUT WHAT DOES IT DO TO THE INDIVIDUAL? It does PLENTY and most of what it does is BAD.

Take me for instance. I'm a horrible example of what push buttons can do to a healthy, husky human.

Back in 1916 Fate stranded me in a little mining camp in the Sierra Nevada, with a sick boy on my hands and not a nickel in my pockets. There was no way of getting out, for the boy couldn't breathe elsewhere. We had to eat. There was nothing to eat on. But I was young—strong—AND MAD! I vowed I'd show 'em—and I did!

I tackled life with my bare fists. I worked in a mine, hauling muck, picking ore, for there was no other work to be found. There wasn't a push button within fifty miles. I fought like blazes for everything I got. My life was as simple as hard and as direct as a timber wolf's.

As a consequence, my body hardened into a fine machine, my senses quickened, my imagination grew. Life was no longer ready made. I made it—I made every particle of it—and I stung with the thrill of creation and discovery. My days were crammed with color and flavor. The passage of the seasons, the turn of the winds, the play of the light upon the desert hills, moon rise, star dawn, the slow coming of the rain, all these became VITAL EXPERIENCES. There was drama in the breathless waiting for the smoke from the "shot" to clear. There was adventure in the stuffing of an Italian squash with eggs and olive oil, Parmesan cheese, spinach, basilico and crumbs. The few people whom I knew became as significant as characters in a Greek tragedy. Life was good!

Then the thing called Lady Luck happened to me and I came to the city to write. I came to the city and rented a stuffy apartment and the only thing that LIVED about me was my tapping hand. All of the quickening, fundamental things which I had once done for myself were now done for me, for my job took all my time. I became a set of weaving fingers, a scuttling brain. I stopped sweating. I achieved a complexion again. I also achieved more money in a week than I had in two months in the mountains. BUT I LOST EVERYTHING THAT WOULD HAVE GIVEN THAT MONEY VALUE.

The appetite went out of me, the flavor went out of life. I forgot natural occasions. I forgot natural moods. I became as artificial as a glass grape. AND MY DEHYDRATED SOUL RATTLED AROUND INSIDE MY BODY LIKE A PEA IN A WITHERED POD.

Well I've gotten wise to myself at last. I'm writing this under a huge, old bull pine, in the middle of a hundred miles of wilderness with a 115 degree sun doing its stuff overhead. I've been out irrigating beans and breaking a trail under that sun and I'm sweating like a steer.

For five months I haven't had a comfort that I haven't fought for as a wild cat fights for food—by sheer brute will and force. I'm tired and burnt and seamed and scarred BUT OHMIGOSH, I'M ALIVE AGAIN!

This is the life! You can have your push buttons if you want them, stranger—but not for me! THEY COME TOO HIGH!

See Life in the Stars

By ARCHIBALD HENDERSON

THERE is a sort of cosmic vanity in the naive assumption that life is confined to . is earth. The extreme insignificance of the earth both in size and position, argues the absurdity of such a supposition.

At night Mars appears to be a very insignificant body as compared with the earth. If we could, disregarding the temperature, take a position on the sun, the earth would look no larger than Mars now looks to use. In volume the sun is more than one million times greater than the earth.

Yet what is the sun as compared to the giant Retelgeuse, inside of which twenty-five million suns like ours could be packed?

The sun has a diameter of less than one million miles. It emits an enormous amount of light and heat in the form of radiant energy. The amount received by the earth is, to be sure, immense.

The sun actually radiates seventy-thousand horse-power per square yard. A square yard of the earth, exposed perpendicularly to the sun's rays, receive one and one-half horse-power of radiant energy.

But this is only an insignificant fraction of the energy the sun radiates. In figures, it is only two-billionth. If the sun were created expressly to light and heat the earth, there has been a colossal waste of energy throughout the ages.

Our sun is only one of millions of other suns in the universe. If our sun were created solely for the sustentation of life on this earth, it is surely irrational to suppose that there are innumerable other planets on which life exists, that life being sustained by those countless other suns.

How many suns there are in the universe may be left to a vivid imagination. But a single illustration may help to give stimulation to that imagination.

If you look at the great Hercules star cluster, you will see only a bright patch, like an illuminated dandelion fuzz. Actually, according to calculation from photographs taken by the 100-inch reflector at the Mount Wilson Observatory there are at least one hundred thousand suns in this single globular cluster.

It is perhaps thirty thousand light years distant; and the photograph indicates that, in the center of the cluster, the suns are crowded closely together. But this is very far from being the case. Even in the very center of the cluster the average distance between adjacent suns is something like one hundred thousand times the distance from the earth to the sun.

Thus we see that there is abundant room for planets to revolve about them in families much greater than that belonging to our own sun. There may be life on each of these planets, instead of the particular sun around which it revolves.

The earth occupies no special or favored spot in the universe. It is not even in the center of our galaxy. Its situation is paralleled by other worlds of probably similar character an uncountable number of times.

The Wailing Wall

The Scene of the Recent Murderous Riots in Jerusalem

(Copyright, 1929)

HERE, DEVOUT JEWS MOURN THE DESTRUCTION OF SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

The ancient wall of which a small part is shown in this photograph, is the remnant of Solomon's Temple, long since destroyed.

On the site of the Temple, 700 years ago, Mohammedans built a mosque for their religion, and for thirteen hundred years Mohammedan Arabs have ruled and owned Jerusalem, the "Holy City," of various religions.

The Holy Wall itself stands on Mohammedan property, and Jews standing at the Wall, or "sitting in solitude to mourn" approach the Wall only by permission of the Arabs, an arrangement made through the British Government.

Here, not long ago, the frightful outbreak of religious and racial hatred began in Jerusalem. Jews wailing at the Wall, unarmed and unprotected, were stricken down and killed by fanatical Arabs.

For centuries devout Jews living in Jerusalem, and many returning to Jerusalem in their old age from the most distant parts of the earth, have mourned at this Wailing Wall the departed glory of the Temple and the ruin of the Jewish nation.

There had been no interference by the Arabs, except unimportant occasional conflicts, until the highly successful colonization of the Zionists aroused Arab jealousies.

The work of Zionists had greatly increased Arab prosperity, multiplying their wages by three, giving them employment, eliminating disease and death by fighting malaria and other sickness.

But all of this, in the estimation of fanatical Arabs, could not outweigh the fact that a religion other than their own, and a race different from theirs, was becoming powerful and dominant in the city held by them for thirteen hundred years, and considered their own for all time.

For the time being peace has been restored, and Great Britain has promised to carry out the duty of maintaining order when she took the mandate for Palestine.

Once again devout Jews are permitted to approach this old Wall with the strange huge stone, and there bewail departed glory.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—Students of superstition find an absorbing topic in the beautiful Century Theater, which recently passed to wreckers, as the most ill-fated of all New York theatrical ventures. Nine fortunes have been employed to shake off its ancient hoodoo.

The Century was a triumph of artistic endeavor—the finest theater, when opened, in the world. Its first night audience was perhaps the most representative ever gathered under one roof. Celebrities came from all over the globe to see what was christened "The New Theater."

The initial production was Shakespeare's "Antony and Cleopatra" with Sothern and Marlowe in title roles. It was not, for some reason, discovered until a few months after the curtain lifted that the acoustics were faulty. A voice could scarcely be heard back of the 12th row.

Hurried attempts were made to remedy this, and although there were slight improvements, architects shook their heads. The theater playhouse was doomed. It was not the first or likely the last theater unable to free itself from the shackles of a silly superstition.

Even the unimaginative began to notice the Century somehow had acquired an eerie and spooky appearance. So for years it wallowed in devastating gloom. The finest stage productions offered there flopped, yet many were moved southward and achieved astonishing runs.

Night club after night club lodged in its basement and upper floors, but were forced to quit. The intrepid Tex Guinan at the height of popularity could not stem the tide of misfortune. The location was ideal and the open spaces of the park at its doorstep enhanced its beauty. Yet——

The Century will now be graced by an imposing building to be occupied by the French [illegible] as a sort of industrial and artistic show place. Along with this announcement are signs of feverish building activities in the lower section. Central Park West is on the boom.

Boys [illegible] used to go out to "paint the town" now go out "to heat up a joint."

It sounds like a wheeze of some sort, but the most sensational dish in London this season was a fricassee of nightingale's tongues. It is to be featured in a cafe in the Fifties at $6.50 a portion.

West is the noisiest and roughest street in town, with its army of truckmen, teamsters and husky dock wallopers. Here will be found hoary chested seamen who have been around the Horn on windjammers, felt the crash of nesting pans and gone down to sea in ships. Giant Percheron horses still tug at ponderous bales with their hooves striking fire on cobblestone. There are tramp steamers loaded for Marseilles and China and prim ocean liners riding high for midnight getaways. The atmosphere is adventuresome, the voice strident and the mysterious tingle of the seven seas is pronounced. Puncent smells from fishing smacks, oil tankers and pier piles of hemp assail the nostrils. It is another world.

The last word in dinner frocks adorned an actress, just back from Paris, in a cafe this week. It is almost to the ground on one side and barely reaches the knee on the other. On the long side is a tight-fitting sleeve and the short side is sleeveless. And if that isn't a clear description, I am not blessed as a fashion writer, and quit shoving.

Most of us—despite sneerers—secretly nurse the Boy Scout idea that if we work hard, live clean and save our money we will some day live in a granite mansion where we can touch a lever to summon the eunuch for a cigaret light. And then—as it happened today—we overheard a rich young wastrel whose life has been devoted to rakish idleness order his secretary to bet $2000 on a 6 to 1 and win. And we wonder!

All the way from Cuba: "Our new $3 banquet cigar is five times the size of a panatella and made of strongest Havana filler. May we send you one?"

Go head—also a stretcher!
